We wrote it: "Do You Want to Get Married?" and Friend Op. made it read "Barred" in type.

He swears that he had no intention of punning—but we'll leave it to you if it doesn't look suspicious.

Still, he's a single man, and Experience has given him no lessons.

Maybe he had a cold.

Some day the law will not say it's murder under certain circumstances.

Tragedy in the movies: The villain drags the helpless canary bird from its cage and throttles it.

A "South Alliance man says that he has his eye on a parrot that needs the same treatment.

The dog poisoner and the "house of mystery" seem to have ceased operations about the same time.

Today's best story: A gentleman, more or less under the influence, was returning from the Imperial late one Saturday night. His feet failed to track just right, and he collided with one of those striped barber poles, head-on. His friends helped him to his feet and heard him say: "Shay, boysh, d'you remember that long-legged girl wish striped stockings? I'll shay she's some high kicker!"

We'd tell you who told us that one, but you wouldn't believe it of him.

All we will admit is that it wasn't

Rufe Jones.

A Lincoln professor says that it is the duty of every family to hold an artistic housecleaning every once in a while, and throw away all pictures and statues which do not conform to the proper aesthetic standard.

This topic has taken a deep hold on us. We are going to appeal to one of the young men at the boarding house, in the interest of art, to grow a moustache.

We hope, incidentally that red tam (hold 'er steady, op—that's a bad word to mispell)—will disappear. When art comes in at the door, it's time for tams to fade away.

Maybe Park will discard that green necktie.

Our motto: "Art for art's sake."

A Russian prince admits that a vegetarian diet made him muscular. He can bend a quarter with his teeth and crack walnuts with his fist. Russian princes are fortunate indeed if they can get vegetables to eat in these days of the soviet.

Now we know why it is that the thin gentleman at the boarding house concentrates on spuds.

The edict has gone forth in New York City, the original habitat of the highball, that all signs advertising liquor must be pulled down or painted over.

Oh, well; the memory lingers, anyway.

The tired married man has one refuge—amnesia. How simple it is to draw a big wad of money out of the bank and then disappear for two or three months. When you return, pretend to have lost your memory. The wife will fall on your neck and weep, the children will suspect nothing and the family dog will resume friendly relations at once.

An Alliance young man who is particular about his washing, the other day wrote a note to his washerwoman and one to his girl, put the wrong adress on each envelope, and sent them off. The washerwoman was well pleased at an invitation to take a ride; but the young lady wept when she read: "If you ever again muss my shirt bosom and rub the buttons off of my collar as you did the last time, I will go somewhere else."

THE SEVEN-YEAR ITCH

(If You Get It Once You Never Want It Again)

Punk Poetry (Guess Who) The paper of the Seven Year Itch ain't sore,

If you get it once, you get it no more. It tells of the kids with a yellow bean,

And also of the kids that's awful green;

For instance there's a guy—a genuine regular guy, With a dandy smeller and a very clear eye.

His mouth is open all the time about, And from this he waits for the words to come out.

He sits real tight—never says a word And is always seen but never heard. He's the only guy with a very bad voice,

An' between him an' a mule you ain't got much choice.

From lack of vegetation on his head, The hair that he has is turnin' red. He's the nicest, sweetest little child, An' the Rabbit's a good name because it's so mild.

—By Willum.

We don't know about the first part of Scotsblaff's name, but we sure do about the second.

Herbert (to Paul)—"Why ain't you going to the show lately?" Paul—"Oh, Willum run out of money."

Roses is red an' violets is blue, See the Seven Year Itch for all dops that's new.

—By Paul.

P.—"Why does Herbert's feet stay so flat on the floor in penmanship?" W.—"Because his feet are so big."

The Seven Year Itch It's on the jump all the time; It prints all the news from a joke to a rhyme.

If you get it once you subscribe for a dime.

—By Us Editors.

If all of us sang like Herbert the other rooms could study better.

Two papers, The Rabbit and The Hornet have tried to start up against us since we began and both have caught The Seven Year Itch and died from it.

Things That Make "Smiles" There are papers that people call "punk"; There are papers we say are "rich." But the paper that fills our heart with gladness,

Is the good old Seven Year Itch.

—By Paul.

Paul—"Bill, I saw Herbert going to Sunday school."

Bill—"I'm from Missouri; you'll have to show me before I'll believe that."

P.—"Why is Willis so sorrowful now?"

W.—"Why, you poor nut, he's going to Emerson today and he will have to leave his girl."

When Herbert was young he was in the dairy business, but he had to quit it because the pump gave out!

CHURCH OF CHRIST 9

The "Win-One" campaign as suggested by the American Christian Missionary society will meet with the approval of all and calls for a unanimous effort on the part of the congregation for a gracious fulfillment. Now is the time to begin. Keep this in mind at every service, inside the church and out. Paul said: "This one thing I do." The winning of souls and training them in Christian service is the Christian's privilege. Jesus said: "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" With this in view we announce our sermon subject for next Lord's day morning: "The Power of Faith." At the evening hour the ladies' missionary society will give a pageant. "Forty-five years of service." This will be a program you will desire to see and hear. You will also be welcome at the Bible school and Christian endeavor prayer meetings. The mid-week meeting Wednesday evening is one of the best. Come to the church with a message and a welcome. STEPHEN J. EPLER, Minister.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

A very interesting program is being carried out by this church and the people of the community are responding most heartily in their attendance at the services of the church. Next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the pastor will speak on the subject "Intercession." In the evening the subject will be "The Great Temptation." Special music at each of these services. In the evening we expect to have some special features that will appeal to anybody and everybody present. Remember you are always welcome at the church on the corner of Seventh street and Laramie avenue, the "Home-like Church." Bring your friends and you will never regret it.

An Economical Broom

NOW comes the DAISY-LEE, a new style, differently constructed broom, with an improved and patented feature that makes it

2 BROOMS IN 1

The protective fibre shield over the shoulder prevents breaking. Underneath the shield the patented fastening of the body of the broom to the handle holds the broom corn in a firm position and keeps it pointing down. When worn pretty well, cut the sewing—remove the threads—The New Style DAISY-LEE BROOM is still good for lots of sweeping. Only a test can prove how one DAISY-LEE will outwear and outlast two or three of the old style, straw-littering kind.

BROOM HINTS Keep the brush end of the broom. Use a broom-holder or place a screw-eye in the end of the handle—hang it on a nail.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

In this day and age of high prices it is good to hear a man say: "I got my money's worth." It affords no end of pleasure to Ford dealers to hear this statement reiterated time and again in the course of a day's work among satisfied Ford owners.

The Ford car admits of no dissatisfaction. It is profitably made by profit-sharing employes, profitably sold by dealers ready and willing to serve and profitably bought by discriminating buyers.

Will history repeat itself? You remember that during the course of the late war our Ford car was last to take a jump in price. You have noticed that car prices are still steadily increasing. Better get your Ford car now. You know the price and you know it's worth the price.
