COMMENT AND DISCOMMENT

disproves it. Murder breeds murder. If Mr. Gregory is really interested in the "good of the state," as he says, we can tell him of a state in this country which once, actuated by sentimentality, voted out capital punishment by means of the referendum, and three years later was invoking the initiative to put it back into effect, not because of one particular case, but because murder had increased to a greater extent than ever.

Happily, the efforts of the Society for the Suppression of Capital Punishment in Nebraska seem to be meeting with no success. If they were, there would be no eleventh hour claim that Cole and Grammer were insane. Fortunately, the doctors appointed to conduct the examination were serious, scientific men, who refused the opportunity of prostituting their professional knowledge to gain the approval of a lot of weeping willows. Present prospects are that a weak-kneed governor will stiffen up and finally see that his duties lie in enforcing the laws he was elected to enforce. Let us hope so. The whole case is getting to be a ghastly joke.
