Scottsbluff has a strike of barbers to occupy the public mind this week. The boss barbers are to blame. If newspaper reports are correct. They hiked the price of shaves from 25 to 35 cents, and not content with that, proceeded to reduce the percentage for the journeymen. The way this worked out was that the journeymen made about the same money as before the raise, and all the extra coin stayed in the till. The barbers say that they have been losing money and refuse to come across, and the journeymen insist that unless they share the raise, they will seek work elsewhere. In this sort of a case, where an irresistible force meets an immovable body, the chances are that the Scottsbluff males will buy safety razors and let their hair grow until it's long enough to be trimmed by the bowl method. A Sunday movie war and a barbers' strike is more grief than they deserve after the great disappointment of the census. All that worries Alliance is the mud.

William Jennings Bryan is stumping the state against Hitchcock, the avowed purpose being to deprive the Nebraska senator of the state delegation to the national convention. It's a long standing war between the two factions, and will furnish an interesting test of strength. Hitchcock has gained in favor during the past four years, while Bryan has lost ground with all save the faithful old guard that have stood by him and voted with and for him since the days when he was known as the "silver-tongued orator of the Platte." Four years ago, the Hitchcock-Mullen combination beat Mr. Bryan for delegate to the national convention, and this year there's blood on the pale moon. Hitchcock has the organization, Bryan the oratory, and democrats and republicans alike will await the outcome.

The highest spot inhabited by human beings is said to be the Buddhist cloister of Hanie, Tibet, where twenty-one priests live at an altitude of 16,000 feet.

Mr. Whittier's death is being hastened by the insatiable horde of autograph fiends and ambitious poets who send their manuscripts to be reviewed by the kind-hearted bard.

Sol Palmer, who strung the first telegraph line out of New York, is still alive at the comparatively early age of sixty-five, and actively engaged in the business of telegraphy.

Colonel Sam C. Reid has three times offered to present the United States with the sword his father used at the battle of Fayal, but congress pays no attention to the offer.

Miss Jennie Gray works a farm of 160 acres in Bottineau county, Dakota, and says she could work another one if the fellows who want to marry and settle down would quit bothering her.

A man in Baltimore claims to have been forced, on three different occasions, to go through the marriage ceremony with women who were perfect strangers to him, and none of whom he has seen since.

Baron de Joest of Paris, noted all his life for his cruel treatment of all men and animals he came in contact with, has left his whole estate of $500,000 to the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals.

A New York man some time ago invested $18,000 in iron and coal ventures in Alabama. Dissatisfied with what he afterward thought a wildcat venture he gave it to his wife, who is now drawing $20,000 a month on its dividends.

It is claimed that a pail or tub of fresh cold water, renewed several times in the course of twenty-four hours, will absorb all the evil odor of fresh paint in a day or two. In the time of spring cleaning the remedy will be found exceedingly useful.

Two human skeletons have been found imbedded in the walls of a boulder near Tuscon, A. T. When found they were in a sitting posture. Sitting down on top of a boulder is a modern accomplishment, but to sit down inside of a boulder is a lost art.

The Southern Practitioner says that the gelatine capsules, so much used in the administration of unpleasant medicines, are insoluble in alcohol. For this reason it is useless to give medicine in this form to inebriates or for some days after the excessive use of spirits.

John Harrigan and his rope have become famous in San Francisco. With the same piece of rope John has pulled twenty-eight people out of the water in the last three days. His best day's work in this line was done about a year ago, when he fished three children and a tramp out of the water.

A San Miguel, Cal., farmer named Pland, hearing that his daughter was about to elope with a railroad hand named Frates, went to town and started home with the girl. The railroad got a fast rig and a revolver, followed the old man and compelled him to give up the girl, and the pair rode away rejoicing.

A Paris correspondent says that this is a true story: A little five-year-old daughter of American parents climbed on her father's knee and asked him to tell her a great, great secret. "Well, Mamie, here is one for you—you were born in Paris." "Oh, what a nice secret!" cried the little girl. "Does mamma know?"

The Diamond
April's Birthstone

Folks born in April have more than ordinary satisfaction in wearing a diamond, for it is their birthstone. This makes the gem a little more individual and intimate for them than it is to the rest of us.

And Thiele diamonds have that superior excellence so much desired in intimate, personal possessions.

Pure in color and supreme in brilliance, they are gems of glorious beauty and exceedingly desirable quality.
