HUCKSTER HAS A BIT OF HARD LUCK

Observing citizens will note that one huckster wagon in the city has lost a canopy top the past week. Incidentally, they will note that the assortment of fruits and vegetables isn't so large as it was a week or so ago. There is but one horse where there should be two. And thereby, as they say in the story book, hangs the tale.

Once this huckster had a big wagon with two or three shelves all covered with a canopy. Last Thursday afternoon he was driving down Laramie, stopping at houses where he perceived the high sign and leaving a batch of new potatoes, a crate or so of apricots, green onions or strawberries according to the desire of the housewife. Business was good. Everything was lovely—and the goose was suspended at a favorable altitude, as it were.

Then came disaster. He had turned in a driveway. A bunch of children swarmed in the yard. In driving out, the horses plunged, turned too short, and the wagon turned over on its side. From its depths, as from a horn of plenty, came the finest fruits and the choicest vegetables. When the huckster arose, ruin stared him in the face. A dozen or more youngsters had gathered around. Boxes of strawberries were spilled on the pavement. Oranges were rolling down the road. And the kids, without waiting for a special invitation, helped him pick things up.

When the huckster departed, his stock in trade was diminished by over half. Happy children, with that stuffy feeling, were lolling lazily in the grass.

And then, at the close of a perfect day, he arrived home, to discover that he had been presented with twins.

REYNOLDS HAS LONG STRING OF VICTORIES

Jack Reynolds of Cedar Rapids, Ia., who will wrestle Pete Buzukos of San Francisco at the roof garden June 25, the last day of the race meet, has a long string of mat victories to his credit, as well as evidence that he is in reality the welter-weight champion wrestler of America. There is now on display in the Thiele show window a championship belt given to Reynolds by the citizens of his home town. They sure spread themselves when they bought it, too. There's enough gold in it to make a double handful of wedding rings. It is in three sections, the central one being ornamented with a raised plaque showing two wrestlers, modeled from an actual photograph of the champion and one of his opponents. This belt goes to the winner, so the announcement states.

Among the victories to Reynolds' credit may be listed the following: Joe Stakes, at Falls City; Logan Clark at Cheyenne; Walter Keegan, Rochester, N. Y.; Vernon Breedlove, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Joe Novak, Minneapolis; Young Jordan of Chicago;

Pete Buzukos, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Joe Risburg, Galesburg, Ill.; Matty Matzuda, Cedar Rapids; Billy Romanoff, Cedar Rapids; William Halas, Canton, O., and, as Reynolds' manager modestly puts it, "aver a thousand others."

Those who attend the race meet on the last day, as well as the Elks who stay over, will have an opportunity to see a real rascal. There will be two good preliminaries, Ray Trabert vs. "Dutch" Mannier, and Ed Green vs. Steve Cannon.
