THREE FAMOUS GENERALS

A man who had great difficulty in emembering people's names was advised by a friend that a simple method for overcoming this was to write the names on slips of paper and pin them inside his coat, where they would be ready for quick and easy reference when needed. He tried this and found that it worked successfully.

One evening he was called upon to speak at a banquet, and having prepared for the occasion before and, he arose and began his speech with great confidence.

"In the beginning of American history," he said, "the man who founded this glorious government of ours, the father of his country, was (consulting his coat lining)-George Washington.

"Later, in Civil War days," he went on, "there arose another great man, who released the black man from his bondage (again he consulted his coat)—Abraham Lincoln.

"In the world war just ended, there stands pre-eminent, as exgreat generals (once more he moved his coat and glanced at its lining) -Hart, Schaffner and Marx."-Earnshaw-Everett House-Organ.
