GOLF LINKS NOW READY FOR PLAY

The organization meeting for the club will probably be held this evening, or tomorrow, at which officers will be appointed and committees named to be in charge of the various activities. A new branch has been discovered in the tennis fans, and it is probable that at least two courts will be built.

Interest in the Country club is steadily growing, and the membership will undoubtedly be sufficiently large so that building operations will be started early next spring.

William Dunn, professional golfer who laid out the course for the new Alliance Country club, has been a well known figure in the game for a number of years. It was largely due to his efforts that the golf enthusiasm in this city developed so quickly. Following is a sketch of his activities in connection with the game:

The first golf courses in America were laid out by the famous golfer, Willie Dunn, and the first exhibition matches played. In the year 1889 a number of prominent Americans touring in the south of France, started playing golf at the well known winter resort of Biarritz, near the Spanish border. These gentlemen were W. K. Vanderbilt, Duncan Cryder, the New York banker; George Mead of Dodd-Mead & Co., the publishers, and several other well known Americans. They took instructions from Dunn, who at that time was in charge of the Biarritz course. They took a liking to Willie, and offering him a good salary persuaded him to come over and lay out courses in America. Dunn arrived in the early spring of 1890 and began laying out courses and instructing Young America how to play the game as it was played in Scotland, the home of golf.

Willie was the only professional in this country at that time, so for lack of competition was unable to arrange any professional matches. He kept busy, however, laying out golf courses and instructing. Shinnecock Hills, Long Island, was Willie's headquarters and from huckleberry bushes and grapevines, he turned it into a fine 18-hole golf course. A pulled ball would land in the huckleberries and if the player had on white trousers when he entered the huckleberries he would come out with them blue.

The following year the Newport Golf club, Rhode Island, brought over a professional from Scotland named W. Davis. Davis was a first-class player and the first exhibition professional matches played in this country were between him and Dunn at Newport. In the first match Dunn beat Davis by thirteen holes in two rounds of 17 and 70, breaking all records for the course. The return match took place a few days later at Myopia Hunt club course, where Dunn beat Davis by twelve holes, again making a new record of the course of 36, 35, 37 and 35. These figures were tremendous golf at the time, as the putting greens were small, the lie bad, and the old gutta percha ball was used.

In 1892 the Manchester Country club of Boston brought over from Scotland the well known golfer, Willie Campbell, who had the reputation of being the best match player Scotland had. A match was arranged between Dunn and Campbell on Campbell's own course at Manchester, and toward the end Dunn, being two holes down with five to play, came along with a terrific finish, holing the last five holes in 3, 3, 2, 3, and 2, winning the match by three holes. A number of the other matches between Dunn and Campbell took place, Dunn winning every time.

In the next few years a number of professionals from both Scotland and England came to this country, against whom Dunn always held his own. At this time Dunn did not compete for the championship, but played the champions special matches for purses and beat them all.

In 1894 Dunn won the championship of the United States and was runnerup in 1895. Two weeks later Dunn defeated H. Rollins, who was the champion, in a big tournament at St. Andrews, N. Y., winning first prize. Joe Lloyd, England's longest driver, won the championship in 1896 in Chicago. Dunn defeated him a week later in Shinnecock Hills and also won first prize in the tournament. In 1897 Fred Herd of Chicago won the championship at Boston, and Dunn immediately challenged him to a match for a purse of $500 at Baltimore. Dunn beat Herd by 3 holes. And so, champion after champion seemed to fall before this country's first professional champion.

Willie Dunn has an international reputation and has laid out golf courses in various countries. He has taught a large number of ladies and gentlemen who later became champions.

Dunn is the inventor and developer of the left leg theory which is being copied by all the leading professionals.

Weather and Crop Report: The past two weeks were dry. For a week we had frost every night, the first killing frost came September 26, and had several since. Most of the corn was out of danger from frost. It was a good thing for the potato vines as they were still green. Not as much corn cut for fodder as usual. Potato yield from 40 to 140 bushels per acre. Corn crop good.

Clay Harry, local commercial manager for the Nebraska Telephone company, left on No. 44 Sunday for Grand Island, where he will attend to various business matters at the district office of the company. From Grand Island he will go to Central City, where his wife and daughter have been spending the past month or six weeks. After rejoining his family, they will spend a few days in Omaha, where Mr. Harry will take up business matters with the company's general office, and on the return trip he will drop in at the Sidney exchange, which is now under his supervision. Recently Mr. Harry's territory was increased to include seven exchanges in this part of the state. It will probably be well along toward the end of the week before he completes the circle and gets back to Alliance.

The prisoner was held up for bootlegging, but only one bottle of whisky was found upon him. The jury retired with "Exhibit A" but filed gloomily back at the expiration of ten minutes.

Gentlemen of the jury, have you reached a verdict?" asked the clerk. "We have not," stated the foreman aggrievedly. "We must have more evidence. Them last two jurymen that sat down to the end of the table swear there ain't an atom of proof against this feller."—American Legion Weekly.

"Hear you've cut out gambling here," said the traveler to Arizona Pete. "Reform wave hit you, too?" "Sort of, but mostly because everybody's plumb disgusted with the cheating that's been going on," returned Pete. "While ago a slick Easterner comes down here with a crooked deck and cleans everybody up. Then the Easterner discovers he ain't won anything except counterfeited money. That disgusts him. So we decide to reform."—American Legion Weekly.

For some time he has been wire chief for the Nebraska Telephone company at Alliance, and has not only earned a high efficiency rating, but has made a number of friends. Mr. Carney has been construction foreman at Grand Island.
