NOTE ON GREEN SUITS
 Why is a green suit? It is harder to answer than the simple question of why is a suit green. A suit is green because it is made that way, but a green suit is an anomaly with no apparent reason for being except that we are mistakes.
 All men buy a green suit sooner or later, but nobody has ever been known to be fond of one after he has had it a few weeks. It is not cheaper, it does not harmonize with civilized surroundings, and is positively unbecoming to most men. Think of any friend of yours as he looks in a green suit, and you will think of all the traits you dislike in him. Yet the suit of gaudy green continues to be made in vast numbers, bought as advertised and worn with purple ties. Perhaps the reason is that the color appeals to the hopeful mood in which a man buys a suit of clothes. Afterwards, however, it serves as a constant reminder of a moment of weakness and fatuity, and in this reaction he learns to hate the sight of his attire, refers to it as a green monstrosity, and wears it surreptitiously to the movies and on rainy days when a fit of melancholy is upon him.—C. B. W. G. in Life.
Plan your needs for the household and buy at practically 50 per cent on Thursday at the Rexall Store.
