FOR HIGH TAXES

When in the sweat of your brow you compute and pay your income tax next March, don't blame the politicians for the size of the bill. Blame yourself. The waste, inefficiency and extravagance characteristic of American public life are due almost wholly to the indifference and apathy of the individual citizen. He sees the abuses clearly enough, he has a semi-occasional spasm of indignation and he curses fluently at times, but he does not act. He puts one party out and the other party in. That is the full extent of his political activity. His intentions are good, but he rarely hits the ball. He worships the ballot box as the ultimate goal of political effort, whereas in a representative government it is only the beginning. Unless the owner of the ballot sees to it that his representatives continuously carry out his will, they form a political oligarchy bent solely upon perpetuating its hold on the reins.

It was the indifference and apathy of the citizens that allowed railroad and other interests to dominate the political machinery of many states. Today, thanks principally to the efforts of the press, the hold of private interests upon state administrations has been broken, but in national affairs a political oligarchy with no other ideals and aims except to serve its own ends is still in control. Whether the politicians run things for railroad magnates and bankers or for their own political benefit, the public always loses. Democracy won't come into its own until everybody takes a continuous, active and intelligent interest in public affairs. Until that day we will have to pay in money and in blood for our selfish, lazy apathy.-December Sunset.
