Bankers' License Law Is Now In Operation

From 2,500 to 3,000 presidents, cashiers and other active managing officials of one thousand state banks in Nebraska will receive licenses on May 25, from the state banking bureau, attesting them to be of good moral character, business integrity, experience and responsibility and capability for conducting a bank on sound lines.

Such licenses are required by the new banking law, passed as H. R. 65, and any person who attempts to act as an executive officer of any bank without the possession of a license, after the date mentioned, will subject himself to a felony prosecution and the penalties of $5,000 fine or ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

The act became a law, with the governor's approval, on February 25. It gave state bank officers a period of three months' grace to secure their licenses. The law makes it the duty of the banking bureau to revoke the license of any person who it believes is conducting the business in an unsafe manner or endangering the interests of stockholders or depositors.

Secretary Hart of trade and commerce is including in the class of “active executive officers,” who are required to have licenses, anyone who makes loans and investments for a bank, or who controls or directs the daily activities of the business.

This will take in a bank president who does not live in the town where the bank is located, but who has control of its affairs, and make him liable for the way that the bank is operated.

In nearly all cases, there will be at least two licensed officers for each bank and in some cases three and four. The number of state banks in Nebraska is about 1,000.

PLAYING “HOOKEY” IS DANGEROUS IN SEATTLE

Ask any kid in Seattle who has a tendency to play hookey once in a while and he will tell you that he always keeps a sharp lookout for Dodge Brothers touring cars and roadsters.

Reason—this is the type of car used by the eight attendance officers of the Seattle school board, who scour the city constantly for symptoms of juvenile delinquency.

More than once one of these cars has pulled alongside the curb or glided up to the swimmin' hole to the great dismay of the youngster who had remained out of school to attend his grandmother's funeral. Out popped the truant officer and before Johnny could move he was under cross-examination.

Now the Seattle school board has made it a little easier for Johnny by giving him a reasonable chance to “duck.” The board has ordered that cars used by attendance officers be plainly lettered in conformity with the style of lettering on all other cars owned by the school district. When this action was proposed it brought forth a sharp and insistent protest by one of the school officials. The objection was reported by a Seattle paper as follows:

“Mr. Fleming said in his communication of protest that as Dodge Brothers cars are used exclusively by the department, any Dodge Brothers car is instantly the object of suspicion on the part of the juvenile population of a community. To make them more conspicuous by lettering would be merely adding to the troubles of an overburdened and unappreciative public servant.”

The Seattle police department also uses ten Dodge Brothers touring cars. The various departments of the city and county together operate thirty-seven.

Little wonder the small boy regards the familiar D. B. monogram with suspicion.

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

A summer camp for disabled veterans of the world war in training under the federal board of vocational training in Lincoln is now assured. The site has not been selected but will probably be the state fair grounds or one of the city parks. Almost one hundred men have already applied to the committee in charge. A swimming pool or shower baths and facilities for outdoor sports will be part of the equipment. While primarily for the disabled, the camp will be available for other ex-service men. Tents, blankets and cots will be furnished by the government, and a separate division of the camp will be established for the married men, their wives and families.

American Legion post records will provide the most complete and valuable history of the world war in existence, when a program just started by Eben Putnam, of Massachusetts, national historian of the American Legion, is carried out. Posts of the legion and units of the women's auxiliary are to compile military and personal histories of members through direct interviews. These records will be doubly checked, first, against war department records as furnished by the adjutant general of the army to each state adjutant general, and second, against the war records of each state.

Legion and auxiliary organizations would have annual muster, according to Mr. Putnam's plan. At this time the roll would be read, and at the name of the deceased member, his military and personal history would be recited. Obituaries of ex-service men and women would be published in local newspapers on the date of each annual muster.

The carrying of any other flags, banners, placards or similar articles in any procession along with the official colors of the American legion and the Stars and Stripes is condemned in a bulletin just issued by national headquarters of the American legion. In a procession, the bulletin states, the national colors always should be borne on the military right, with the legion colors on the left, and the colors should always be provided with the proper guard, composed of men who appreciate fully the great honor conferred upon them.

The local post of the American legion is making great plans to entertain General John J. Pershing, when he visits his home at Lincoln to deliver the commencement address at the University of Nebraska. June 3 has been designated as “Pershing day” and invitations have been sent to all Nebraska posts to send representatives to take part in the welcome arranged for the former leader of the A. E. F. Past Commander Earl Cline will act as toastmaster at the banquet and State Commander Robert G. Simmons will be one of the speakers.

Photographs of the cemeteries in France where their sons lie buried will be supplied to gold star parents of Lynchburg, Va., by the American legion post there in conjunction with the Kiwanis club.

Andernach, on the Rhine, Germany, where the Boche maidens are the prettiest, once the heart of the thriving iron cross market, is the second stronghold of the German empire to be occupied by the American legion. The new post is Andernach post No. 5. Andernach was the headquarters of the Third division in the Third army days and now quarters the Second brigade of the American army of occupation. Amoroc post No. 4 of the legion is situated in Coblenz.

“There is not the least doubt in my mind if it had not been for the determined stand of the American legion, Zimmer and I would still be in prison,” writes Sergeant Naef, who with Sergeant Zimmer was arrested by the Germans following an attempt to capture Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, notorious slacker. “The American legion came to my aid during one of my darkest hours, and it demonstrated by its unwavering loyalty toward me and its sublime aspirations and lofty ideals concerning comradeship are ever a living truth.”

A military band from Jefferson Barracks, Mo., with American and American legion flags in a procession, was passing through the central section of St. Louis. As they neared a prominent corner, a man yelled out: “I'll bet this ten dollar bill that I won't take off my hat for those flags.” He lost to a legion man nearby. Likewise he lost his hat, which hit the street with such force that further use was out of the question.

Immediate relief for veterans of the world war is demanded by hundreds of resolutions coming into national headquarters of the American legion from all parts of the country. During the week ending May 7, more than 500 resolutions calling for prompt legislative aid from congress and signed by civic, commercial, religious, patriotic and fraternal organizations, were received in response to an appeal made by F. W. Galbraith, Jr., national commander of the legion.

Chambers of commerce in forty-two cities from Maine to Texas mailed resolutions. Governor McKelvie of Nebraska was among the public officials who approved the legion program for beneficial legislation. One resolution bears the seal of the city of Paducah, Ky., and it is signed by the mayor and city clerk. The brotherhood of railway trainmen, the united mineworkers of America and the railway mail association, three of the largest and most influential labor organizations in the world have also subscribed to the legion's program. The Lions, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., and league of women voters replied from hundreds of local units broadcast over the country. Not one reply unfavorable to the legion's legislative stand has been received.

AT THE MOVIES

“The Plunger,” a Fox story with George Walsh in the star role, will be the attraction at the Imperial this evening. The photoplay was made from an original story by Thomas F. Fallon, under the direction of Dell Henderson. Virginia Valli, known as the girl with the perfect profile, has a delightful part in the role of Alice Houghton—whose father, a member of the stock exchange, is ruined by an enemy. Walsh is seen as “Take a Chance” Schuyler, whose meteoric rise from office boy to millionaire left him dizzy but smiling. Gripping drama is relieved by some brightly humorous spots, advance notices say.

Zane Grey's story, “The Last of the Duanes,” is scheduled for Saturday. The star in this production is William Farnum, which is a safe indication that it will be well worth seeing.

Sunday's bill is featured by Wanda Hawley in “Food for Scandal.” Sylvia and Watt had loved each other for years and years, ever since they were kids, but they were both orphans and as poor as church mice, though they both came of very aristocratic families. Sylvia thought that two could starve as comfortably as one, but Watt felt that he ought to have at least one client before he married. A man's man, you know, even if he is in love, and Watt hoped he knew his duty toward a wife. So Sylvia decided to drum up a little trade for her young lawyer-lover. And she started right in vamping rich clients for her poor dear boy? Naturally, she provided “Food for Scandal” in that town, all rightee.

“The Smart Sex” is the photoplay for next Monday. The story opens with a show girl stranded. A goose, part of the show property, is wanted as a meal by the members of the cast. She claims it. Goes to next town and in order to get money, takes part in amateur performance. Wins prize money. Wealthy young man sees her—likes her—takes her to a lunch counter for food after show. She goes to country—with goose, near the young man's father's estate. He leaves home—becomes a farm hand—his folks object. They try to show up the girl. He tells them he loves her—will fight for her. A party is given for her—some jewels are stolen. She is suspected. But she discovers the thief. Proves she has brains as well as good looks. Happy ending.

Frank Potmesil, of the First National bank of Hemingford, underwent an operation Wednesday for appendicitis.
