

Miss Helen Hewitt, daughter of Judge and Mrs. H. H. Hewitt of Alliance and Miss Eleanor Frampton, University of Nebraska girls who are traveling in Australia with the Kellerman troupe, have written again to Lincoln friends of their experiences, says the Sunday State Journal.

They have appeared in Sidney and on tours through the country, and when they last wrote were soon to go to Adelaide for two weeks. They are enjoying their life very much and so far have been very fortunate, they say. The young ladies testify that they like Miss Kellerman very much, that she is a very good "sport," strict as to the conduct of her company, and that she is always practicing something. They say that with the possible exception of Louise Pound she is the hardest worker and does more things well than anybody they have even known. Besides her diving and swimming, which made her reputation for her, she walks the wire, toe dances, and sings some. They add that everybody in Sidney seems to like to listen to her recit and that they are getting fun out of every moment of their stay.

After graduating from the University Miss Frampton and Miss Hewitt were instructors for a year in the physical training department of the Lincoln high school. They are with the Kellerman troupe as eccentric dancers. As dancers they are pupils of Portia Sweet and Ruth St. Denis. Miss Frampton is a member of Gamma Phi Beta and Valkyrie. Miss Hewitt is a member of Delta Zeta and Valkyrie. Both were prominent in the women's athletic association in the university.

They write of the trip across: "While on the boat we got all the thrills of sea-sickness, almost had a collision with the Sonoma when seven days out at sea, were initiated into the rites of Neptune's dominion, did our share for the boat's entertainment, and missed nothing that was going on. We had eight hours in Honolulu and filled every bit of it with sight seeing and enjoyment. We went to the Moana hotel for dinner. It is on the famous beach of Waikiki, and when there we saw the champion girl swimmer whose name is Bleibrey. In addition to a fine American dinner we had the native food, pears, papia, and poi.

"Moreover an American college man and two college girls who knew of us through fraternity affiliations appeared and took us about in a car and put us on the boat for the next part of our journey.

"Our next landing was at Samoa. We got up early in the morning and watched the sun rise as we stemmed in through the narrows. Pangro Ponga is said to be the most beautiful harbor in the world. It winds up through high mountainous islands covered with trees. Each island has a narrow sandy beach with palms and little grassy hills hidden away in them. We went to one hunt and saw the girls do their native dance, the Siva Siva.

"Sydney has a beautiful harbor, very different from Samoa. It has not the soft beauty of the South Sea islands but is rugged and rocky. When we got off the boat and had resisted with officials, we walked down the big business street. We could hardly understand the signs in the streets or the English of the people to whom we spoke. For example, the "singlet" of the laundry list proved to be a shirt or blouse, a department store is a "draper's" and "lollies" is candy.

"The first thing the Nebraskan notices who enters Sydney," write Miss Frampton and Miss Hewitt, "is the saloons. Every other building seems to be a saloon and the streets are lined with loafers and intoxicated people, and beggars. By about six o'clock at night the streets are so full of drunken men that it is hardly safe to step out alone. Women unimaginably horrible haunt the parks and alleys picking up bottles to trade in for drink. Anybody who has anything to say about the curtailment of personal liberty by the United States government could be cured by a stay in Sydney. There were men on the steamship who were native Australians and who cribbed the United States about prohibition when they were on the boat. But when they came to Sydney they said they couldn't go back fast enough; that drink was running the country; that the United States never did a wiser thing than when it prohibited the selling of intoxicants. The tone of an American city like San Francisco is so far ahead of that of a city of saloons like Sydney that there is no comparison."

Among the entertainments that were given in honor of Mrs. Sanford L. Clements, formerly Miss Hattie Renswold of this city, who has been visiting Alliance friends, were a kitchen shower given by the Misses Mable and Izola Worley at the Country club and their home last Friday, and a miscellaneous shower given by the Misses Avis Joder and Alta Young at the home of the latter on Saturday evening.

The Misses Worley gave a luncheon at the Country club in honor of Mrs. Clements, and later the party came to the Worley home in the city, where the shower took place. A pleasing feature of this entertainment was the presentation of gifts for the kitchen by two colored children, who were introduced as the "Gold Dust Twins."

Saturday evening, at the Young home, a miscellaneous shower was held. The bride was presented by each of the guests with a card inscribed with a verse, and by following directions in the verses the gifts were located in various places scattered all over the house.

The following was the guest list for both affairs: Misses Mable and Izola Worley, Miss Avis Joder, Miss Alta Young, Mrs. Fred Feigins, Mrs. Eugene Black, Miss Edna Benedict, Mrs. Walter Bledsoe, Miss Ethel Graham, Miss Lulu Sturgeon, Mrs. Hail Price and Mrs. Sanford Clements.

Judging by the publicity, a man gets out of an unwarranted place on the slacker list, it can't hurt him much in the long run.

England is going to save two hours' daylight a day, now, instead of one. Why not set the clocks ahead a week?

Funeral Services for Stephen W. Holt Held on Saturday Afternoon

Funeral services for Stephen W. Holt, pioneer resident who died early Friday morning, were held from the home of George Gadaby, 509 Cheyenne, at 2:30 p. m. Saturday, Rev. Stephen J. Epler of the First Christian church in charge.

Stephen Wesley Holt was born in Pittsfield, Vermont, August 23, 1860, and died at the home of his aunt, Mrs. E. A. Gilbert, at Alliance, Nebraska, September 2, 1921. He was a few days past 61 years old. He came to Illinois in 1887 and for one year was sheriff of LaSalle county. In July 1901 he came to this part of Nebraska and for the past eighteen years has resided in Alliance. He worked for the Burlington for eight years and the rest of the time plied the carpenter's trade.

He was married to Rose D. Manning, September 10, 1882. About three years later the wife and only son died. His mother died at Alliance eighteen years ago. His only surviving relative in this country is his aunt, Mrs. Gilbert.

Ten years ago he was affiliated with the M. E. church but had never taken membership in Alliance.
