THE LIVESTOCK MARKET

Omaha Live Stock.
OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 10.—CATTLE—Receipts, 17,000. Monday's heavy run of cattle had a rather depressing effect on the trade and business was slow in starting. Most of the corn fed cattle on sale were shortfeds and not very desirable. Prices were much the same as last week for these kinds. Packers were slow to take hold of the western grass beefs and bids and sales were around weak to 15@25c lower than Friday. The same was true as to cowstuff, only more so. Business in stockers and feeders was very slow and bids were mostly 15@25c lower on the liberal offerings.
HOGS—Receipts, 4,000. The week opened out with a moderate run of hogs and the market active at advances. Most of the hogs sold at prices that were 10@25c higher, with packing hogs showing more improvement than light grades. Best light hogs made a top of $8.35 and bulk of receipts sold from $6.35@7.25.
KANSAS CITY Live Stock.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 10.—CATTLE—Receipts, 42,000. Stockers and feeders, steady to weak. Early sales, feeders, $5.00@6.50; stockers, $4.50@7.00; heavy calves, steady to strong, bulk, $5.25@6.25; she stock, slow, steady to lower, most cows, $3.50@4.25; fed heifers, $7.00; most grass kinds, $4.00@5.00; other classes generally steady, part load yearlings $10; top otherwise, $9.25; choice heavy steers, $8.90; better grade grassers, $6.00@7.00; most vealers, $8.00@9.50; bulls mostly, $3.25@3.75.
HOGS—Receipts, 5,500; 15@25c higher; mostly 25c higher than Friday's average; 195 to 225-lb. weights to shippers $8.35@8.45; 300 pound averages, $8.25; packer top, $8.40; bulk mixed, $7.75@8.25; bulk of sales, $7.40@8.35; throwout sows, $6.25 and up. Pigs, steady to strong.
SHEEP—Receipts, 16,000. Sheep steady to strong; bulk fat ewes, $4.75; lambs, strong to 25c higher. Top westerns, $8.75; bulk, $8.25@8.65.
St. Joseph Live Stock.
ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Oct. 10.—CATTLE—Receipts, 4,500. Steady to 25c lower. Steers, $4.75@8.75; cows and heifers, $1.50@8.25; veals, $4.00@8.00.
HOGS—Receipts, 4,500. Steady to 25c higher. Top, $8.35; bulk, $6.85@8.30.
SHEEP—Receipts, 3,500. Steady to 25c higher. Lambs, $7.50@8.75; feeders, $6.25@6.75; wethers, $4.50@5.25; yearlings, $5.50@6.00; ewes, $1.00@4.50.

COMMENT & DISCOMMENT

One would think, with half a dozen more pages at our disposal than usual, as was the case last Friday, that there ought to be plenty of room to print the important things of the week. But there wasn't. There is never quite room for everything, or quite time enough to write and get it into type on the few occasions when there is room. That's why it is that the poet has sung, quite truthfully even if not quite rhythmically: "Oh, the editor's lot is not a happy one."

For instance, we got quite interested in a history of "Western Nebraska and Its People," which was being delivered in Alliance last week. We wrote a stirring introduction, which we expected to follow with a brief history of Alliance and of Box Butte county, taken from the account by Judge Ira E. Tash, editor for Box Butte county. We discovered, along about five minutes after the first copy of The Herald came up from the press, that the conscientious makeup, knowingly or otherwise, had chopped the story in two. It's this sort of thing that makes the death rate for makeup men so high. Other printers manage to live their allotted term, but very few makeup men ever die a natural death. Either the editor gets them or the butcher cuts them down, and none is there to mourn their untimely end.

However, readers of The Herald shall not be deprived of the opportunity of assimilating a little of the early history of Alliance and Box Butte county. All of us, save a handful of the pioneers who were here when it all happened, know far too little of this important subject. Therefore, we have decided to follow up last week's article with a few of the historical facts and even if some of them should happen not to be new to you, Friend Reader, all of them should be interesting:

Beginning with the convention held in the summer of 1886, at which the decision was made to secure a division of Dawes county and that, if successful, the southern half should be called Box Butte county, Judge Tash traces the history of the county down to the summer of 1921, when his copy was turned in to the compilers of the history. A special election was held on proclamation by Governor Thayer, and of the thousand or more who voted at the election, E. I. Gregg, R. M. Hampton, F. M. Knight, Robert Garrett, John O'Keefe, Si Coker, Moses Wright, C. H. Underwood, Julius Atz, Jack Mettlen, Henry Clayton and George Gadsby are listed as now living in Alliance. Nonpareil was chosen as the county seat and the county officers took office as soon as the result of the vote was definitely known. A frame court house, twenty by thirty, was erected, and a fireproof safe purchased, payment being promised when the taxes, which had not yet been levied, were paid in.

For three and one-half years Nonpareil continued to be the county seat. In the meantime the Burlington railroad came through, hitting Hemingford and Alliance, in 1890, and missing Nonpareil by fully five miles. An election was held to change the county seat in March 1890, which was indecisive, and in April of the same year the question was again submitted. Nonpareil then dropped out of the race. The question was settled at the November election.

An understanding between the Burlington and the Lincoln Land company, which owned town lots in both places, and the citizens of Alliance, it was understood that Alliance was to have the Burlington shops and Hemingford the county seat, thus making business good for the Lincoln land company. There were 126 votes cast in Alliance in favor of Hemingford, on the basis of that agreement, and Hemingford won the county seat by 16 votes. Alliance votes were believed to have been ordered out by the railroad, but though there was some disappointment and talk of force on the part of some Alliance men, nothing came of it. In March, 1899, Alliance was made county seat.

The city of Alliance, according to the county's historian, had its inception on May 27, 1887, when the state sold the school lands in the county. At the auction, there was no bidding on the land until the present site of Alliance was reached. The sale was made in forty-acre tracts, and these went for from $33 to $40 per acre. The high price was due to the fact that it was understood the Burlington would establish an important division point. The Lincoln Land company refused to plat the land and offer it for sale until the railroad came through, but settlers came anyhow, and a town of perhaps a thousand population grew up near the site of the present post office. This was named Grant Lake, and was going strong in 1887. The railroad refused to recognize the name, because of the similarity of the name to Grand Island, and when it came to the town, about January 1, 1888, the name Alliance was given to the station.

The sale of lots was widely advertised by the railroad, and on February 25, 1888, took place. Prices for residence lots ranged from $200 to $300 and some of the business lots brought from $1,000 to $1,500. The lowest price was $600, paid for the lot where the Chinese laundry now stands. The people from Grant Lake began moving into the town and by July 4, the population of the city was around 2,000. That year the city adopted a village form of government; in 1891 it became a city of the second class. The first mayor was Frank H. Smith, chief clerk to Division Superintendent Phelan. R. M. Hampton, the present mayor, as the city's second executive.

The city was the western terminus of the Burlington until September 1889. For the next year and a half it was a lively place. The hard times hit the town in '93 and '94, but in '99, when the Burlington commenced to build southward to the Platte valley and to Denver, it secured a new lease of life.
