The Price of Power

In the last issue we stated a rule of success that has been put in use by this writer, and which has proved effective. Besides capitalizing the failure of your adversary, and making the most of his mistakes without letting him know it, the second rule that will bring a man success is: Dare to be different from your competitor. The world will not pay much attention to the common in life. If you are an exact duplicate of the other fellows who are in the same calling as yourself, you will not be noticed by the average man. We find it is so in any calling. It is the uncommon men who are noticed, not the common men who are noticed, not the common men who are noticed, not the common men who are noticed.

This brings me to the subject today. Success is only another name for power. Power is the ability to produce results. And results is what the world notices most—not how you did it, but did you accomplish what you set out to do? This is the question asked by the busy world. You find it in the kitchen, counting room, shops and stores, in the pulpit and pews, everywhere—in darkest Africa, in most civilized America. Lincoln's mother over the wash tub, as well as Lincoln as president at Washington, desired this boon. Now, most folks look upon power, or success, as something for the few. But really, power in our respective callings is within the reach of all. Life, brought down to a fine point, means success. There is no such thing as failure to a man who has found the right calling. The trouble with a lot of us is that we are in the wrong calling. So we repeat what we said last week, power or success comes to him who is willing to pay the price.

Accepting a calling does not make one successful. Enlisting does not mean a man is a soldier. Acquiring success comes only after taking the necessary steps that lead to the goal. Joining the choir does not spell a seasoned singer. Getting married does not necessarily mean that we are fulfilling the great responsibilities that go with that act. Entering the ministry does not make a preacher. Lots of men are in the ministry who should be behind the soda fountain, or in a manicuring parlor, instead of the pulpit. The wedding ceremony does not price we pay to rightfully fulfill the obligation of man and wife, that really makes us successful in those sacred offices.

A season of training is always costly. We enjoy that for which we pay dearly much more than that for which we pay little. The secret of the love of the pioneers for the old homestead is the price they paid for it. A man who has paid a great price to attain success is enthusiastic in his calling because of that fact. All men and women who have left their impress upon human history have paid dearly for the privilege. U. S. Grant, the warrior, became such after a long series of years as at the exacting work of a tanner's son. He filled the highest office within the gift of men, but he paid a great price for the privilege. Garfield, who attained the same office, pushed himself from the wood chopping block through innumerable obstacles and attained his goal only after paying an exacting price. We know that Lincoln attained success over all but impassable barriers. Jefferson studied day and night before he succeeded.

Teddy Roosevelt, from a weakling dying of consumption, isolated himself from the social whirl, paid the price of sacrifice and received the highest reward within the gift of his countrymen. The world will always thank God for these giants of power. Edison, a newsboy, spent sleepless nights trying to solve the mysteries of nature. Robert Penry discovered the north pole, but not until he paid the price of twenty-three years of repeated effort, accompanied by unspeakable hardship.

Charles Dickens was a factory boy who persisted because he would not take returned manuscripts as proof that he could not succeed; William Ridening had the same experience. Carnegie rose from a telegrapher. John Jacob Astor from a butcher's son. John D. Rockefeller from a newsboy and a shoe lace peddler. Richard Mansfield through unspeakable sufferings became one of the greatest actors. Charles Spurgeon, the orphan boy, became the greatest preacher since Paul. D. L. Moody, the ignorant shoe clerk, became the world's greatest evangelist.

Horace Greely from a farm boy rose to the country's greatest editor at a time when to be an editor was anything but a snap. But space fails me to mention the names of hundreds of others who have risen to the top rung of the ladder of fame. All of these and thousands of others have had to battle for power and attained it only after paying a great price for it.

John the Baptist, of sacred history, was a power only after living a life of thirty years of isolation. Christ himself paid an unspeakable price to go down in history as the Incomparable Man. All of these had to pay the price of being hooted at as being peculiar, and perhaps as being unbalanced because they strayed from the common beaten path of their contemporaries.

Finally, in the christian life we enjoy success only as we are willing to pay for it. It is true that power belongs unto God, and no less unto man; but man must work for it. It is true that Christ said that we may do the work he did, and even greater; but only as we are willing to pay for the price.

The church has been playing at religion long enough. When we make religion easy we rob it of its power. If your religion cost you nothing, it will be of little value to anyone else. If your profession cost you little or nothing it is a pretty good proof that you will be a failure in life. Success is within your reach, but you must pay for it. We could mention some of the prices that must be paid for power. This we will do in the next issue.

REVIEW OF THE YEAR

Homicide, larceny, graft, Marriages, births, and divorce. Poets and bankers gone daft. Quack cures and memory courses, Congress in stormy debates, Labor and Capital clinching, Jazzing in forty-eight states, Bootlegging, boozing, and lynching, Business deals, losses and gains, Crimes of "You robber!" and "Faker!" Bobbed-haired and short-skirted janes, Bills from the butcher and baker; Mixture of sadness and cheer, Loving and laughing and sinning, What of the coming New Year? Repeat this from end to beginning. —Max Leif, in Life.

MARKET REPORTS

Livestock.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 2.—(By State Bureau of Markets.)—CATTLE—Moderate receipts of cattle were reported at Omaha and trade showed some improvement. The more desirable kinds of weighty heaves were favored by shippers and were comparatively scarce. Ordinary short-fed steers and plain butcher stock ruled steady to strong. Good quality 1,300 pound steers sold the middle of the week at $7.60. Sales of medium grades were within a spread of $6.25@7.00. Yearlings up to $7.15 and young fat heifers, $6.15. Good beef cows moved largely around $4.25@4.50. Desirable light feeders suitable for short-term finish were in fair demand up to $6.25.

HOGS—Receipts of hogs were liberal and prices were 25 to 50¢ higher. Medium and light butchers were up 40¢@75¢. Bulk $6.85@7.10; top, $7.25; bulk packing grades, $5.25@5.75.

SHEEP—The bulk of receipts consisted of killing lambs. Packers took most of the offerings at an average of 25¢ higher. Best fat lambs sold at $11.00 and the bulk of good lambs went at $10.75@10.85 with medium grades around $10.25@10.50. Sheep were scarce and 25¢ higher. Ewes selling $3.50@4.25; yearlings; at $3.00. Fed lambs moved at $9.50.

Grain

WHEAT—The market was uncertain within a narrow range but prices made slight advances for the week. The principal factors were passage of the Russian relief bill, decreased receipts and better milling demand. The visible supply was 49,431,000 bushels, an increase of 1,361,000 bushels.

CORN—Russian relief purchases of corn served and stimulated the market. Receipts were light and demand fairly active. Omaha cash sales around 40¢.

POTATOES.—Advancing prices featured the potato market. Sacked Northern round whites were up 45¢ at Chicago, selling at $2.00@2.20 per 100 pounds with market active. Red River Ohio advanced 15¢ selling at $1.45 f.o.b. Minnesota. City markets made similar gains. Growers got from 5 to 10¢ more for Rurals at 85¢ per 100 pounds in Idaho and $1.00 in Colorado. Western Nebraska Irrigated District, growers holding for higher prices. Haulings light. Carloads f.o.b. sacked white varieties $1.00 per 100 pounds.

December estimated production for U. S. 346,823,000 bushels, for Nebraska 8,160,000 bushels.

Poultry.

Receipts of poultry were materially decreased and prices were slightly higher. Local prices, springs 17@18¢, hens (light) 17¢, (heavy) 20¢, socks 10¢, ducks 16, geese 15@16¢, turkey 30@35¢.

Eggs were down 4@5¢ in eastern markets and local quotations were somewhat lower. Per case, $11.00@11.50, per dozen, select 45¢; No. 1, 43¢; No. 2, 31¢.

Dairy.

Lack of any demand for butter at the principal markets except for immediate needs, together with comparatively heavy supplies caused the market to continue easy and unsettled. Receipts of fresh butter continued heavy and storage stock moved slowly. Chicago price for 92 score 40¢. Local prices, country (best) 30¢, (common) 21@23¢.
