Those Percentages and Fool Reforms

That Aren't." The Outlook magazine reformers. Most of the professional reformers are men who left the ministry for one cause and another. Drs. reformers. The Century magazine car-ried an excellent article that all public men should study and profit there-by. Its title is, "The Dictatorship of

There is one thing I notice about all of these so-called reformers, and went wrong through the dance; still another said that 57 per cent went wrong through the automoblies. These statements would be real funny if the makers were not so earnest about precept to follow the Master's steps.

tation to say something striking, knowing that the statement of an out-sider is not apt to be looked into as the local man's statement would be. Many yield to this wicked trick and if one will take the trouble to look up the source of these "percentages" he will likely find that some over-heated public speaker said that "some one said," that "some one else told him," that "his friend told him," that "he heard the wife of some evangelist known for his enthusiasim say," that he "read from some professor," or "heard a professor when he was in college," say "that steen per cent of the girls go wrong through the auto," or by eating green pickles after a dish of ice cream, etc., etc.

Another strange thing about it all is that the great American people here in Alliance, a town that ought to know better, will "fall" for it, and swallow these statements whole. Last spring an evangelist made a serious statement in a neighboring church about a cerpercentage of our young people in school afflicted with venereal diseases, and when the writer asked for proof, he said that a local man said, etc. The local man evidently did not have much proof, for he covered his tracks promptly. An investigation resulted, with no proof of the statement.

Another strange thing is, as a young girl speaker said in our pulpit last Sunday evening, "These men would lead you to believe that if the girls kept straight, the boys would remain straight. Why all this percentage of pirls? Why not boys?" I have known these men to say that if we save the pirls that the boys will take care of themselves. Well, that may be so in the life of these men, but as far as we are concerned, we found that as a boy we were tempted to the that as a average reformer is right, the girls lead the boys wrong or they are weaker and more easily led than the boys. We believe the opposite is true, that a girl will hold to the straight and nurse life much longer than the pure life much longer than the average boy. We would like someone to try to convince us to the contrary. Next time you hear a reformer, be he your pastor or an outsider, make these 'percentage" statements, ask him for the proof. Thell him that you den't believe it and won't until he comes across with the evidence.

A lawyer friend said to the writer the other day, "I never was so much disgusted in my life as I was the other evening when I went to hear that reformer speak." And while he did not say what it was that disgusted him we are not far from wrong when we say it was some "percentage." for law-yers are not in the habit of taking for granted statements without proof or reasonable foundation.

Then, too, the nature of these re-forms is real laughable. Take that preacher who recently started out in Massachusetts to put over the law to compel people to attend church. When The bill came up for reading its sponsor "took sick." It seems to me that he was sick before, but didn't know it. There are many more sick folks abroad in the land who would comnel people ae attend church. We laughingly remember the statements of an enthusiastic reformer during the wet and dry fight, that when the saloon would be out our churches would be full of people. Well, this preacher preaches to a well-filled house twice each Sunday, and oftentimes people are turned away, but we do not see any difference in the "percentage" of people who at-tend church now and before the saloons went out of business.

To hear some talk, you would think that if Sunday theaters were done away with that the churches would be crowded to capacity all the time. Now, we know better than that, for we were in towns where there are no Sunday theaters and the percentage of people attending church was much less than here in Alliance. Now, this is not say- Community Club ing that we favor Sunday pictures, for we do not. But it is a statement that we do not believe that people who go here on Sunday would attend church f it was closed.

Again, we make the statement that ocal people could better use their time May I convey my appreciation for in doing bigger things than "reform the editorial eppearing in the last issue of the Herald concerning "Perils He never asked his disciples to become that Aren't". The Order has a reformer. Dixon and Hanson, who spoke so elo-quently at one of the local churches in a "union" service, are both former Baptist preachers. The latter at one time was the pastor of the same church that licensed the writer to preach.
The former used to be pastor of the East Side Lincoln Baptist church. It that is their percentages of girls who go wrong. Recently three percentages were given out by different men who are in the game of referent men who are in the game of reference and reference are referenced as a reference are referenced as a reference and reference are referenced as a reference are referenced as a reference are referenced as a reference and reference are referenced as a reference ar are in the game of reforming the rest of us. One said that 67 per cent of the girls go wrong through picture shows, another said that 60 per cent went wrong through the dancer still would go further and say that we were never asked to "make" people better, but to persuade them by example and

People may be educated into better The writer knows the evangelistic game from the inside and intends to end his ministerial life in that work when his children have grown up, and we can understand how some of those fellows make these percentage statements. They are the fruits of a temptation to say something striking, be if public sentiment had not been created in its favor? I sometimes believe that the country went dry about twenty years too soon. Public senti-ment is certainly not in its favor yet. Some of the so-called best citizens are breaking the law daily.

> Now, do not misunderstand me, I would not for the world approve of its return, but simply point to this as an example that the only way to secure changed economic and social conditions is by changing the people's ideas and that is a slow work of education by precept and example. If we church members, and preachers in particular, set the example, we would need to wor-ry less about drinking, dancing, theaters, etc.

Take another "fool reform"—the ef-fort to compel pupils to read the Bible in the public schools. Now we would like to see it read without comment, but we would emphatically oppose the "compelling" part. Let us win people to Christianity and we will soon find a changed order of things. If we put forth less time reforming and more at performing, if we were as preach-ers and churches more practical and less theoretical we would be worried less with these so-called "immorali-ties." Let us make the christian life more attractive, and the dance and all these imaginary evils will have less attraction for the young.

Suppose it were possible to get all the young folks to stop dancing, theater going and joy-riding, suppose all of these activities would cease im-mediately and these young folks would all turn to the church to satisfy their be able to give these young folks what their restless natures call for. It is not, therefore, folly to ask them to give in any line of wrong action.

One of two things is sure: If the

Let us talk of reform less and perform more, so that when any of these young people see that Christ died for them we will be able to offer them sometimes in return for the old pleas-

Most of these men who are everlastngly crying for reform this and that, are usually men who know little or nothing of what they talk about. Instead of abolishing these things, we will find that some of them at least should be improved and not abolished. It would be well if these reformers would leave their study cots and take a little exercise and look into some of these supposedly evil things. Perhaps they would learn that the professional reformers have been making state-ments upon hearsay evidence. Again, we repeat, that when the church will perform more, there will be less of this reform talk and noise.
