reasury Department Unprepared for the Geary Law Decision.

Other People Took the News of the Supreme Court's Decision.

WASHINGTON, May-16. - No orders had been issued at the treasury department at the close of business Monday as to the deporting of Chinese under the Geary act. The instructions under which collectors of internal revenue and United States marshals are now operating direct them to make no arrests of unregistered Chinamen until further orders. These orders may be given after the next cabinet meeting or deferred for a longer period.

Conservative estimates place the amount necessary to deport the unregis-tered Chinese at $6,000,000. The suggestion is made in official circles here that Chinese unregistered may now go to the courts and be allowed to register and remain in this country if they estab-lish clearly to the satisfaction of the judge that from unavoidable causes they have been unable to procure certificates, or if they prove that they were residents of the United States at the time of the passage of the act. At the Chinese legation the Chinese minister courteously declined to express any opinion upon the decision of the court, or to give any intimation as to the course his government may deem proper to adopt.

Mr. H. J. Moy, counsellor to the Chinese legation, said that the contest against the law would doubtless be referred to congress when it meets in the fall. Under present conditions it will be impossible for the officials to execute ally no money with which to carry its provisions into effect. It was an unfortunate and deplorable condition of affairs, he said, which threatened the existence of peaceful and peacable rela-tions of China and the United States, and left hundreds of natives in each country, in the territory of the other, practically hostages for each other.

Satisfaction on the Golden Coast. SAN FRANCISCO, May 16. - The de cision of the United States supreme court, affirming the constitutionality of the Geary act, has been received with $75,000. great satisfaction throughout the Pacific

> Among the Chinese in this city the news spread like wildfire, and in a very short time crowds of Chinese could be seen assembled on the different corners, discussing the matter among themselves. Many merchants were visited, and those who had complied with the law appeared to be very jubilant. Little red posters in Chinese characters were being distributed through Chinatown, which informed the men who had placed faith in the Chinese Six Companies that they had been beaten, and that the United States government would be no longer

At the Chinese consul's residence the ing questioned: "We can do nothing but obey the ruling of the court. We expected a favorable decision and are fect, because of the great expense of deporting the Chinese, for which there is no appropriation and the damage it would do farmers and the coast." No surprise was expressed in the offices of the internal revenue collector and the collector of the port. They were pleased with the result, but would await instructions from Washington. It would cost $6,000,000 to deport the Chinese, and no such sum was available for the purpose.

Saloons Are Closed. MUSCATINE, May 16 .- Nothing developed that throws any light upon the conspirators of last Wednesday night's dynamite outrage. The district court granted injunctions against all the remaining saloons, and 38, all told, have closed their doors.

Governor Boies spent the day viewing the wrecked homes, and said: "I have visited the injured buildings, and found the ruin complete. I am surprised that any of the inmates escaped without serious injury. The crime is one that deserves, as it receives, the execration of all men. To the limit of my power will I aid in discovering and bringing to punishment the perpetrators of this crime. My powers as governor, however, are much more limited than many seem to understand. Congressman Springer also touched on the tariff. "The result of the last election," he said, "is the beginning of a new departure in American politics. The power has passed to the west and south, and henceforth the great states west of the Allegheny mountains and south of the Potomac are strong enough of themselves to elect the president of the United States. The time has come for legislation on Democratic lines for the purpose of crystallizing into laws the principles of the Democratic party. The Democratic party will rise to its supreme height of responsibility and execute the will of the people. It will be a good leal, measured by the number of buildings and beauties and novelties; very little, compared with the sum total of things there are here to see. Assume that we enter the enclosure at the Fifty-seventh street entrance, where the electric elevated road has its terminus. For a dime we may ride all about the grounds, but we choose to walk, that we may the better see. It is early in the morning of a fine day, and the bracing air of the lake makes us feel strong enough to take in the entire exposition in a single day. So we bravely set

The first glance about inspires us to un wonted energy. In the foreground is a cluster of beautiful buildings. There are tions of the states of the Union to the World's fair. Instantly our opinion of the vastness of the United States, of the importance, wealth and grandeur of its constituent commonwealths, rises many degrees. So attractive are these state buildknow which first to enter; and in the end we conclude to enter none, but simply to hasten along and glance at their exterior, coming another day to behold their interiors. It is well that we reached this decision, for when we come to think that all but one of the forty-four states of the found most of the vouchers and upon Union are represented, as well as several In fact, we soon alter our plans for the

It is 10 o'clock, and after an hour's work we have seen nothing but the Art build-houses nor the Hooden temple which the ing and the state structures. Yet when we take the map of the exposition and cal-culate the distance traveled we find we have walked precisely two and a quarter miles. If this is the scale on which this exposition is built, we say to ourselves, we shall have to be up and doing. Before us is another group of palaces, more costly and more beautiful than the state houses. These are the buildings erected by the foreign nations, France, Great Britain, Germany, Mexico and Spain face the lake. Farther back, ranged along winding avenues, and showing beautifa perspectives at every step, are Nor-way, Sweden, Ecuador, Guatemala, Brazil, Costa Rica, Hayti, East India, Chili, Colembia and several others. Charming as buildings we have walked fully eleven the views are here we rush on, for a walk of a mile and a half has been necessary to

Now we take a rapid run around the Fisheries building, though a dozen times tempted to enter, and cross the inlet canal and skirt the United States Government building. It is not a large building, as buildings go here, but to go around it requires a walk of nearly half a mile. Another half mile jaunt is necessary to see Uncle Sam's outdoor exhibit—the life-saving grow the marine heavital, the harsaving crew, the marine hospital, the har-bor and channel buoys and the big guns. We save ourselves a third of a mile by viewing the big brick battleship from the

we have had before our eyes and in our curosity all the time. It is the leviathan the Manufactures and the Liberal Arts. Ever since we entered the grounds it has been looking down upon us with its thirty acres of roof rising so majestically toward the sky, and we are determined to circumnavigate the monster. In the whole exposition there is nothing more startling than the perspective one finds before him in the structure. It seems to be endless. The southern end shows a mere speck of light, and human beings standing there are like ants in size. It comes very near being the ideal perspective which runs to a vanish-ing point. We walk on and on, and when we finally emerge into the grand central court of the exposition, with the Adminis-tion building at one end and the peristyle at the other, we pause for half an hour in spite of all our good resolutions.

Finally plucking up courage to leave this matchless spot we note the lateness of the hour and abandon our intentions to walk entirely around the monster building, contenting ourselves with a long look at the great front which faces Lake Michigan. Then we walk under the beautiful peristyle, through the great Columbian arch, past the Music hall and the Casino and out the pier which extends more than half a mile from the shore. Returning, we pass the eastern end of the Agricul-tural building, pausing for moment before the grim walls of the Rabida convent; and the skirting in quick succession the In-dian school house, the building in which Herr Krupp of Essen shows his giant guns (stopping a few minutes of course for a peep within), the Leather building and the quaint structure in which the forestry products of the whole world are exhibited.
Here we conclude to go no farther south.
The car houses, some power houses and dairy barns, as well as the immense but unfinished stables and sheds in which the confusingly, but with symmetrical and effective arrangement — with towers, domes, spires, minarets, giant roofs, ornaglory and magnitude of the exposition have dawned upon us. It is so much horses and other stock are to be shown later in the summer and many other structures of more or less interest lie beyond, but we must stop review here.

Now turning north we take a run around the Yucatan ruins and the imitation rocks in which the cliff-dwellers have burrowed, and at our right hand is the welcome sight of a lunch-room attached to the Dairy building. While satisfying hunger we again look over the map and are surprised to discover that we have walked—how far do you think?—seven and a half

The afternoon is now well advanced, but we are bent upon carrying out our plan. So we suppress the impulse to stop for a good look at the Indian villages and council houses, the mummies and skulls in the Anthropological building, and rush through the outdoor exhibit of the French colonies, the windmill display and the acres of agricultural implements, past the great amphitheater in which the horses and stock are to be exercised before the judges and 7,000 people all comfortably seated, and finally emerge through the Venetian screen or arch which stands guard over the southern end of the grand

Here the view is superb. Then passing to the left of the Fifty-seventh street entrance we have Nebraska, North Dakota and Ransas on our left hand, and Georgia, Tennessee, Minnesota, Arkansas and Kentana and Service of the Art palace showing a mile away. As far as the eye can see are throngs of people crossing the stately bridges, and the waters of the canal, the basin and the lagoons are alive with gay gondolas and swift-moving launches. tucky on our right. Occupying the gas house and gas-making plant, and whole south f ont of this square are the round into the plaza between the railway magnificent buildings of New York and station and the Administration building serves as a glorious sort of a vestibule to the exposition. The sun is sinking low now, and we must make haste. A half mile walk takes us past the Pennsylvania railway's model station and John Bull show, the immense cold storage warehouse where one may skate all summer on real ice, and several minor outdoor exhibits. Another half mile has carried us past the Now we are somewhat tired and sit Mining building, and the Transportion down near the shore of Lake Michigan to rest. The water, with its moving picture of steamships and pleasure crafts, divides our attention with the splendid view of nearly to the north end of the Horticul-Japanese have erected across the lagoon.

A few minutes' walk gives us a view of the Woman's building and of the Illinois state house—the ugliest structure, by the way, to be seen on the grounds—and we have completed the grand circuit. We have had a glimpse of every important structure within the enclosure, and are able to say with pride and satisfaction that we appreciate the magnitude and the beauty of the exposition. Our weary limbs speak eloquently to us of the efforts required to reach this knowledge, and gladly do we agree to leave the Midway plaisance or side-show feature of the exposition to another journey. Merely to see the grounds and the exteriors of the
