FIGURES ON GERMANYS IMPORTS. Regulations Governing Importation of Live Stock and Fresh Meat.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The agricul-tural department has received from its agent in Berlin a report of the imports of agricultural and other products into Germany. It shows that during the first six months of 1895 the following percentage of the total imports of the German empire of the articles specified were obtained from the United States: Cotton, 80 per cent; wheat, 15; maize, 56; grass any simothy, 15; dressed beef, 59; oil cake, 33, and lard lanelin, 99 Accompanying the statement are copies of the quarantine and prohibition regulations now in force in the German empire in regard to the importation of live stock (whether for import or transit only) and fresh meat. These regulations are of importance in view of the stringent measures governing importations from this country. All live stock brought from the exterior of Germany must be examined by a veterinarian before permission is granted to transport it across the boundary line of the empire. The expense of such inspection must be paid by the importer, and no animal affected with a contagious disease can be brought across the line. The regulations affecting America are as follows: The importation of cattle and fresh beef is prohibited. The provincial presidents of the German government may order horses and sheep imported from the United States, to be held at the landing place for observation and inspection. Pork imported from the United States must be accompanied by a government certificate of
