PROTECTION, PROSPERITY AND PATRIOTISM

The Shibboleth that will Carry
Republicans to Victory.

MILITANT MACCOLL MEN IN MAJORITY.

Proceedings of the Lincoln County Republican Convention.

Saturday's republican convention was like an old time republican love feast. Its enthusiasm was inspired by the proceedings of the St. Louis convention; its patriotism and earnest work grew from an honest sense of duty; and its doings were the result of deliberation in which no man or class of men, was recognized paramount to the principles of the party.

Saturday's convention marks the turning point in the political history of Lincoln county. In it were the wheel horses of old, and the wheel horses of the future; it was composed of the better class of citizen partisans, of men willing to sacrifice personal ambition for the good of the party and good government. Its enthusiasm was doled as a death knell to the coterie of populists who watched its proceedings; the harmony and prevalent good feeling were signals indicating success in November next.

Chairman McAllister, of the county central committee, called the convention to order at 10:30 and requested secretary Pro Tem John Sorenson to read the convention call. Major Woodhurst was chosen temporary chairman, and in taking the gavel remarked that he had never made a political speech and was too old to begin now. He was glad, however, that McKinley had been nominated and that New Jersey was now in the Union. On motion of C. F. Iddings, Carroll C. Hawkins was made temporary secretary.

On motion the chair appointed J. S. Robbins, P. L. Harper, C. F. Iddings, Fred Kade and John Kinkeade, a committee on credentials. Just at this juncture H. W. Hill entered the court room from the clerk's office with a large picture of William McKinley. This was greeted with an outburst of applause that was repeated every time the name of McKinley was mentioned.

The chair suggested that while this committee was out the convention should be entertained by speeches from the orators present. George E. French was called upon and made a neat speech in which he said it was a pleasure to him to be with republicans on this eve of prosperity. The man nearest the hearts of the American people had been nominated by the republicans for president, and the people would see to it that he was elected. Appeals from the north and the south, the east and the west, from democrats and populists, from every sect and creed had come to the republican party in this great crisis to put clean men in office and pull the country out of the slough of despond. All parties were looking to the republican party. Democracy had been a failure; the revenue of the country had grown less and less, and the country was getting greater in debt day by day. Give us national men and we will have prosperity instead of depression. Select as delegates and candidates men in whom we can have confidence and then stand by the nominees. Do this and after next November we will have no populist governor in Nebraska, and no Kem in Washington. Mr. French was applauded loudly and his speech was marked by great earnestness and intense feeling.

Hon. J. S. Hoagland was next called upon and said that the delegates were here assembled to do the duty of loyal republicans. They had come to select delegates to the various conventions and candidates for two county offices. He wished to congratulate the republicans on the work of the national convention, and on their candidate for president. He was a man who did not have to go fishing for brain food to sustain him through presidential perplexities. He was a man of American ideas, American policies and American principles. The voice of the people has been heard for protection, reciprocity and McKinley, and this cry will not be hushed by the soothing syrup of sophistry. Weigh well whatever you do—do your duty and work loyalty until next November, and success will crown your efforts.

Judge Grimes was then called on and responded by saying that every man in the convention had heard him, knew his sentiments and convictions, and therefore he would give way to Hon. W. M. Geddes, of Grand Island, candidate for state auditor, whom he introduced to the convention.

Mr. Geddes said he was a candidate for state auditor and asked the support of republicans. He believed we were now launching out on a sea of prosperity. Nebraska was smiling with a grand army of advancing republicans. He was a sound money republican and believed now was as good a time to meet the financial issue as any other.

Judge Grimes was again called for and said that he was a great deal like an old Methodist sister he once knew, who explained when everybody got happy at the revival meeting, that she was "too full for utterance." The nomination of McKinley, and his election meant the beginning of an era of prosperity. The administration of Cleveland had been death to labor. This would all be changed with the advent of republicanism in control of national affairs. Great Britain was with democracy and against republicanism.

W. T. Wilcox was then called and said that the exponent of McKinley in Lincoln county was George E. French. Mr. French should be the spokesman for the party in this county. Major McKinley and Mr. French were born in the same state, the same county, and on adjoining farms in Trumbull county, Ohio. Mr. Wilcox said that Mr. Cleveland could not even get a top seat in the top gallery at the Chicago convention, so great was the democratic revolt against his rule. Neither would any member of his cabinet secure recognition at that convention. And yet the administration had carried out the policy it had agreed to. Holcomb was not so good now as when he was elected. Mr. Wilcox said when he was a boy at home his father gave him a colt. The colt was a beauty and that fall he took him to all the fairs; he was not so pretty the next spring, and he took the colt to his father to ask him what was the matter. His father examined the colt, found it full of fleas and ticks, and exclaimed: "Why, the colt is overloaded!" That was the matter with Holcomb. He was overloaded with political ticks and fleas. Ask your populist friends if they are disappointed in Omar M. Kem. Populists had said of Kem that if he was incompetent when they sent him they would keep him in congress until he was competent. He had been there six years now. Was he yet competent? In mentioning Jack MacColl Mr. Wilcox elicited considerable applause. He stated that the next congressman would be nominated at North Platte July 3d.

The committee on credentials then reported as follows, recommending that delegates present cast the full vote of their delegation, and the report was adopted: Mylander—Fred Kade, Wallace—P. L. Harper, Saml. Farmer C. M. Hayden, Hinman—G. W. Eves, W. M. Hinman, Blaine—J. W. Johnson, Gaslin—Fred Ginapp, Buchanan—E. B. Merrill, E. E. Reese, Medicine—C. A. Glaze, C. C. Hawkins, T. M. Cordes, Circle Hill—J. L. Seely, Plant—Geo. E. Prosser.

George Finn moved that the temporary organization be made permanent. George E. French moved that a committee of five be appointed to select eleven delegates to the state convention. The motion carried and the chair appointed Messrs. French, Love, Hawkins, McMurray and Hall.

J. S. Hincley moved that a committee of five be appointed on resolutions. The motion prevailed and Messrs. Matthews, Hinman, Richards, Hincley and Hayden were appointed.

On motion of Iddings a committee of three was selected to name delegates to the congressional convention. The chair chose Messrs. Iddings, Finn and Matthews. Mr. Iddings suggested that J. S. Hoagland be allowed to select the delegates to the senatorial convention, and on motion of W. H. C. Woodhurst he was empowered to do so.

George E. French moved that a committee of five be appointed to select delegates to the representative convention, and that said committee confer in the matter with J. S. Hoagland. Carried, and the chair appointed Messrs. French, Hall, Lee, Farmer and Sorenson.

French suggested that delegates hand in to the secretary their choice for precinct committeemen as soon as possible, and in motion of Iddings the convention took a recess until 2 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 2 o'clock Chairman Woodhurst called the convention to order. The committee on resolutions reported as follows, and the report was adopted:

The republicans of Lincoln county rejoice in the prospect of our nation's early emergence from a condition of depression and ruin, brought on by the present democratic administration. They endorse the platform of the recent St. Louis convention as a statement of principles which if enacted into laws will bring about national prosperity at home and world wide respect abroad. One great need of our country is that the present populist rule and ruin shall cease. Our country should be so managed that a return to the assessment basis so long in existence prior to this year may be re-established. A reduction of expense with relief to the people is better than increase of assessment for the relief of extravagant county officials. In that regard we each and all pledge our most earnest efforts toward the election of a republican county attorney and county commissioner.

Protection, prosperity and patriotism are our watchwords. The committee on delegates to the state convention reported the following gentlemen selected, and the report was ratified by the convention: A. S. Baldwin, John E. Evans, Washington Hinman, Alex. Stewart, R. A. McMurray, William Woodhurst, P. L. Harper, Ira L. Bare, C. C. Hawkins, W. T. Wilcox and Fred Kade.

The committee on congressional delegates reported for the following selection, which was approved by the convention: C. F. Iddings, T. M. Lee, John R. Ritter, Con Scharmann, Cecil Tuell, Samuel Farmer, W. A. Gregg, Samuel Fulkhouser, J. S. Hincley, W. H. C. Woodhurst and James Aule.

J. S. Hoagland reported the following delegates to the senatorial convention: H. M. Grimes, E. H. Shaw, H. W. Hill, C. W. Burkland, Henry Coker, J. S. Robbins, T. S. Richards, A. O. Kocken, Samuel Fulkhouser, Andy Scharmann and G. W. Finn.

For the representative convention the following delegates were reported and selected: G. E. French, F. M. Brooks, J. H. Clark, John Ellis, Fred Ginapp, E. E. Reese, J. H. Baker, G. A. Schrecongast, David Love, John Sorenson, John Knowles.

G. E. French moved to make the nomination of county attorney. Carried.

W. T. Wilcox in a fitting speech presented the name of Thomas C. Patterson.

B. R. Merrill, of Buchanan, nominated George C. McAllister. Mr. Patterson secured the nomination on the first ballot, the result standing Patterson 48, McAllister 17. Upon being called for Mr. Patterson thanked the convention for the honor conferred, for, said he, "it is an honor to be placed upon the same ticket with William McKinley." Mr. Patterson said he first took his place in the ranks of the republican party in November, 1862, when our martyred president, Abraham Lincoln, asked the country for three hundred thousand more, and he was still fighting for republican principles. He pledged himself to go into every precinct in the county and work for the entire ticket. He was loudly cheered.

The following county central committee then selected: Mylander—Fred Kade, Wallace—Louis Kelly, Sunshine—Geo. L. McLaughlin, Hinman—J. W. E. Hinman, Blaine—J. W. Johnson, Gaslin—W. D. Lyle, Buchanan—W. G. Shoresch, Medicine—J. W. Bickford, Osgood—J. M. C. Wood, Hall—Loren Sturgess, Baker—J. H. Baker, Dickinson—Wiley Matthews, Well—N. P. Votaw.

Gregg, Nowell—Henry Cordes, Circle Hill—Geo. Seely, Plant—W. T. Bowen.

George E. French was made chairman of the county central committee. It was a position he would rather decline, he said, but as it was the evident desire of the convention he would accept. On motion of J. S. Robbins he was given an assistant, P. L. Harper, of Wallace, being selected. J. S. Hincley moved that the chairman be allowed to select his own secretary. Carried. On motion of R. A. McMurray, the convention adjourned.

THE COMMISSIONER'S CONVENTION. After the adjournment of the county convention George Prosser was chosen by the delegates from the Third commissioner district as chairman of the convention to nominate a county commissioner.

J. S. Hincley was chosen secretary. A motion carried that an informal ballot be taken for nominating purposes. It resulted: C. A. Glaze 9, J. S. Robbins 13, C. A. Dempsey 5, I. B. Bostwick 1.

The first formal ballot did not change matters much—Glaze 10, Robbins 14, John Keith 1, Dempsey 5.

There was no election in the second: Glaze 9, Robbins 15, Dempsey 6, Keith 1.

The third formal stood: Robbins 13, Glaze 11, Dempsey 4, Keith 1, P. L. Harper 1.

Another new man was voted on in the fourth: Robbins 11, Glaze 14, Dempsey 3, Harper 1, Hincley 1.

The fifth ballot looked as though a long struggle might be encountered before a choice: Glaze 11, Robbins 12, Dempsey 6, Harper 1.

The sixth formal ballot stood: Glaze 10, Robbins 14, Dempsey 6, Harper 1.

The seventh was almost a repetition of the sixth: Glaze 11, Robbins 14, Dempsey 6.

A call of the house showed a possible vote of thirty.

The eighth ballot did the work: J. S. Robbins 17, C. A. Glaze 10, Dempsey 3.

The chairman declared J. S. Robbins the nominee of the convention. When called for he heartily thanked the convention for the honor. He said he was a republican because he could no more be anything else than the waters of the North Platte river could help
