"The Conservative will pay in gold coin a reward for the discovery of any capital in manufacture or farming, which has been brought into Nebraska and made productive by populism. Who of all its leaders has accomplished anything for the general welfare of Nebraska?"

In an interview the early part of Tuesday, July 25th. this week, Geo. H. Keeney, of New York, president of the association of silver clubs, said that he did not believe free coinage would be made one of the principle planks of the democratic platform next year. the democratic party fear that defeat will follow if free silver is made a leading issue. Mr. Keeney does not believe that anti-imperialism will be made a leading plank, for many prominent democrats either approve the policy of the administration, or feel that the present course has been inevitable and must be fought through to success. Mr. Bryan's policy of attacking the administration's position is, in the opinion of Mr. Keeney, losing him support.

People's Party Conventions.

for the Sixth district. This call is to organize the populists of Nebraska in harmony with the people's party of the United LUCIEN STEBBINS. Chrmn Organization Com. for Neb. North Platte, Neb., July 20, '99.

The "kissing bug" has reached Omaha and North Platte can expect a visit in the near future as the bug seems to be making a tour of the country. Prof. Lawrence Bruner the noted "bug man" of the state university has captured a few specimens of the "kissing bug" and classified them. Prof. Bruner says that the bug first made its appearance in the United States about three years ago but it has not been very pestiferous until this year. North Platte's numerous fair maidens will have to beware of any odd looking bug they find flying around or they may be blessed with a swelled jaw due to the amatory "kissing bug."

PREJUDICE ASTO GLASSES

Sentiment of More Enlightened Undergoing a Change.

HOW DR. SEYMOUR VIEWS SUBJECT

Employers Apt to Be Thoughtless-People Taking Better Care of Their Eyes Nowadays,

Every one knows in a general way that spectacles are worn to assist the sight, and there is a large number that know nothing more than that they help the aged to see to read and the near sighted to see at a distance. The prejudice against glasses has, on the one hand, acted to deter persons from wearing glasses who really need them, and, on the other hand, has acted to influence employers to decline to engage applicants for work who are wearing spectacles.

It is hardly possible in these few lines to attempt to combat these prejudices or to present arguments sufficient to prove their fallacy.

The first one is so unreasonable that no sensible person in this enlightened day would be rash enough to advise people who have defective sight not to wear glasses, nor would these people be foolish enough to listen to such advice. While in regard to the secon prejudice mentioned employers are soon and easily convinced that the man who notices his sight is failing and promptly uses the means at his command to restore it is the more wideawake and capable workman and does better service than the careless person who falls to notice his impaired sight, or if he does, takes no interest or makes no effort to restore it. The truth of the matter is that in the hands of a skillful oculist and optician there is no means at the present time which will correct so many eye troubles, such as nervous headache, squinting, cross eyes and restore good sight as suitable leases in all their various combinations, and people have not been slow to find this out and act in accordance.

The common ignorance in regard to glasses and their use has given many the idea that persons can choose their own glasses. But the fallacy of supposing that the glasses that seem the pleasantest for a few moments are apt to prove the correct ones for constant use is not so general as formerly. Not every one suffers from such a course, and yet the great number that do makes it safer and advisable, in order to avoid any risk, to have their eyes thoroughly examined by a competent optician, even in simple cases, Experience has taught the public much in this matter tof the importance of proper glasses), but there are still many persons who would decidedly object to ill-fitting, ready-made clothing, who still do not hesitate in the infinitely more important and delicate matter of sight, who will still follow up the advertisements of spectacle dealers and go into a store to have a pair of glasses fitted without thinking of the danger of thus treating an organ whose mechanism is of the most delicate nature and whose use is almost as valuable as life itself. You would not think of going to a prescription clerk and asking him to prescribe for you in case of sickness. How much less, then, should you think of trusting your eyes to a mechanic or a salesman who may know absolutely nothing of the anatomy, physiology or pathology of the eye or the detrimental effect of glasses fitted to the temporary conditions of sight which are found by the simple means of trying different lenses until the customer has found what they think will do. People who wear glasses should have their eyes examined by an optician who understands their anatomy and condition from a medical standpoint. These examinations can only be made in properly appointed rooms, and with lights arranged for
