A Gas Explosion.

What came very near to being a serious accident occurred at the Roman Catholic parsonage Wednesday evening. The housekeeper, Mrs. Kate Denan, had placed a can of gasoline in the cellar to guard it from the heat of the sun. It afterwards developed that there was a hole in the can and a considerable portion of the gasoline leaked out. As the cellar is almost air tight the gas which the leaking gasoline caused could not escape. Mrs. Denan had occasion to go into the cellar Wednesday evening and as she opened the door she lit a match. In an instant the entire cellar was aflame the match having ignited the gas. Fortunately Father Haley was in the yard and hearing Mrs. Denan's cry for help came to her assistance at once or she would probably have been badly burned. As it is she has some very serious burns on her hands and arms. Father Haley and others who came to his help succeeded in putting out the fire before any great amount of damage was done to the parsonage.

The county clerk has received sixty copies of the laws enacted by the last session of the legislature. The statute provides that these shall be distributed as follows, one to the county judge, one to each member of the board of county commissioners, one to the sheriff, one to the county treasurer, one to the county attorney, one to each notary public, one to each justice of the peace, one to each constable, each road overseer and each assessor and two to any representative who was a member of the legislature and who lives in the county. Sixty copies, the largest number allowed to this county, is not a sufficient number to supply all of the officers to whom they are due but they will be distributed as far as possible.

ODD FELLOWS BLOCK. E. B. WARNER.

Fast Freight Wrecked.

The second section of train No. 19 was wrecked just east of the bridge shortly before two o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The train had a double-header on and was coming at a pretty rapid rate when the draw-head of the twenty-fourth car broke and dropped causing fifteen cars to leave the track. The head engine, which was in charge of Jack Sullivan, was cut loose from the train and came to town and Mr. Sullivan notified the officials of the wreck. The wrecking train was leaving the yards eight minutes after the whistle blew. In the mean time the rear engine had brought the twenty-three cars which were not derailed to town. The caboose and two of the rear cars also staid on the track. Of the fifteen derailed cars eight were soon put back on the track but seven were so badly wrecked that six of them were burned in the ditch and the remaining car will require considerable repairing before it can be used. Five of the seven cars which were so badly wrecked were refrigerator cars and although they are the heaviest and most strongly built cars on the road they were stove in as if they were so many egg shells. Some of the trucks were buried several feet in the sand.

The cars were all loaded with merchandise and after the wreck fresh hams, cove oysters, and postum were scattered around on the prairie. All the merchandise which was good for anything was picked up and after being loaded into other cars was sent on west. The wreck tore up quite a stretch of track but it was cleared away sufficiently to commence the reconstruction of the track by seven o'clock and by nine o'clock trains were passing over it.

No one was injured by the wreck but the loss of property amounts to considerable. The work of clearing it up was finished yesterday. It was extremely fortunate that it did not happen on the bridge as it would have been exceedingly hard to handle there.

As the wreck was so close to town it proved to be quite a Mecca for sight-seers and a large number of North Platte people visited it.
