performance, the attendance at the Innes concert yesterday afternoon was creditable to the town, the attendants numbering about 400. That the selections of this organization were fully appreciated was evidenced by the applause which followed each number, and that Innes is a gracious conductor was attested by his willingness to respond to the plaudits. While the program numbers were high class compositions, which only those musically educated can appreciate to the full extent, yet so perfect was the harmony of the instruments that all felt well satisfied.
