Support Home Industries.

Whenever a plan is suggested for the development of the town the first suggestion, invariably, is "Bring in more industries." It is customary to throw out all sorts of inducements for the location of factories, including exemption from taxes for a time, free sites, houses, and these methods have contributed so much toward building up hundreds of prosperous municipalities that their wisdom can not be questioned.

But the people who join heartily in the work of bringing in new industries, and who show the greatest enthusiasm over this feature of the public work in which all good citizens share, sometimes are the first to forget that the new industries brought in and the old ones already here require continuous support and failing to get it, become a hindrance rather than an aid to development.

We are apt to overlook, too, the fact that the home merchant is entitled to as much consideration as the factory which we have obtained by special effort. The merchant is a necessity—even more so than the factory; for who cares to live in a community where there are no stores, or where the stores are closed and barred and the merchants have moved away, forced to other fields by lack of patronage?

The retail store, properly conducted, is an industry that should have the support of every loyal citizen. Our pride in the home town is measured by our willingness to support its merchants and its industries.

It is not necessary to build a Chinese wall around our community—to refuse to buy outside when we can do so to advantage. But the man who will send away for something that he can buy at home on as good or better terms needs education and lacks loyalty. Sometimes, unfortunately, the very one who should be least liable to this criticism, the local merchant, is given to sending abroad for things which he ought to buy from his neighbors. Then, again, there is the farmer who finds it easier to mail his order to a big city than to come to town. Often he is handicapped by bad roads and thus has a valid excuse. But he ought to be able to buy by mail from our own merchants as safely and as advantageously as from someone at a distance with whom he has no acquaintance. If he is not furnished the facilities it is time for the improvement of our merchandising methods. And he ought to have good roads that would make a trip to town a pleasure.

Much remains to be done to strengthen our local business interests. We ought to give real support to any move that will tend to keep our money at home.

Last week closed with two calamities, a wreck on a railroad at Manchester, N. Y., in which twenty-six were killed and seventy injured, and the death of twenty-five in a picture show at Cannonburg, Pa. In the former instance the accident was due to a defective rail; in the second to the explosion of a film followed by a cry of fire and a general stampede.

The Line of Life. The line of life curves from the side of the hand between the thumb and forefinger around the base of the thumb to the center of the wrist joint. According to chiromancy the pretended art of judging the character and foretelling the fortune of a person from the aspect of the hand, if this line in the left palm is regular and deeply colored it predicts a long and happy life; tortuous, colorless, feebly marked and broken it announces ill health and short life; narrow, but long and well colored, it indicates wisdom and ingenuity; broad and pale it is a sign of folly; deep and unequally colored it denotes malice.—New York Telegram.

Coronation Graft. The practice of running the fountains and conduits with wine on coronation day was abandoned after the reign of Queen Elizabeth, but another old custom was observed up to the coronation of George IV. After the king and the company had departed from the banquet in Westminster hall the doors were thrown open, and the people rushed in and cleared the tables of everything—vases, cloths, plates, dishes, etc., all vanished in a few minutes. And, as Sir Walter Scott tells us, the nobility were not above taking away the satellite and spoils.

An Office Cushion. If those of you who have a husband or brother or sister working in an office will go to the trouble of making a flat cushion for the chair of the worker you will find that it saves the trousers or skirt from getting "shiny" and also helps to retain the garment in form.—Good Housekeeping.

Speaking Truth. Speaking truth is like writing fair and comes only by practice. It is less a matter of will than of habit, and I doubt if any occasion can be trivial which permits the practice and formation of such a habit.—Ruskin.

Time to Go. "Pa, is a vessel a boat?" "E—yes—you may call it that." "Well, what kind of a boat is a blood vessel?" "It's a lifeboat. Now run away to bed." Boston Transcript.

Not Fast. "I understand," says the father, "that you have been going with a very fast set." "Fast nothing!" retorts the son. "Why, not one of them has a four cylinder car!" Judge.

The essential thing is not knowledge, but character.—Le Conte.

HE WOULDN'T BE A HERO By M. QUAD Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Joe Harper was a sturdy young citizen, and Ellen Taylor was the daughter of another, and they were engaged to be married. Joe had a very good match. Joe was given to some of the best of those romances that are so common, and the young man was a bit frivolous. That is, he would pull after a certain class of girls from town had made for a while. Joe had left town in the evening behind for when he departed.

Those novels were about heroes, cavaliers, chivalry and knights. They told of perils, combats and rescues. Mrs. Taylor would have chuckled them into the store had she found them, and boxed her daughter's ears besides, but she didn't find them. They were read at night after the rest of the family was asleep. By the time she had finished the second one the girl was looking unwell, and instead of saying prettily, he said by gosh. In all the novels the chevaliers had plumes in their hats; Joe didn't even wear a hat's feather in his old straw. He had a hole on his shoulder instead of a lance, and he plowed corn with an old denbitten mare instead of riding around on an Arabian steed.

No, Joe didn't size up for slacks, compared to the cavaliers. In the meadow, near the field where Joe was plowing corn, a colony of bumble bees had taken up their quarters in a tuft of grass. This fact was known to the Taylor family, and the farmer intended to rout them out some evening. Bumble bees are not chivalry, but they are the next thing to it. At 2 o'clock one afternoon, when it was seen that Joe and the old mare were hard at work, Miss Ellen put on her bonnet and walked out to that bumblebee caucus. At five feet from it she halted and screamed and danced around.

The scream reached Joe Harper's ears, and he let go of the plow handles and made for the fence. In an instant he realized the situation, but he didn't dash forward and fall over several stumps. Instead of so doing he sat on the fence and called out.

"Ellen, why in thunder don't you run away?" "Oh, the bumble bees!" she shouted. "Yes, but don't stand there like an idiot. Make for the house!"

A week had passed and the stings had been cured, when Joe got another chance. At 2 o'clock one afternoon Miss Ellen sat on the veranda sewing and wondering how Joe would look in armor and on horseback, when she caught sight of a big dog coming along the highway on the gallop. She screamed for Joe again. He dropped his hoe and came running, but paused as he reached the fence to ask what was the matter.

"Mad dog! Mad dog!" she shouted. "They climb up that ladder on to the roof of the kitchen!"

No rushing to the rescue, no beating the dog's brains out, no remarks worth leaving to posterity. Miss Ellen was furious with him. That was the reason a rung of the ladder broke as she was descending and precipitated her on an ashheap. Within an hour the chevalier of the hoe received word that he need never show up at the Taylor house again. The engagement was off.

"Now look at that!" he exclaimed when he had been made to understand. "There was that ladder handy to climb I saw the dog coming and knew it belonged to Perkins. Was there any need for me to break my other suspender? And if it had been a real mad dog would it have helped the case any for both of us to have been bit?"

Joe stayed away. He had been two to and he obeyed. At the end of two weeks he took a day off to go fishing. Miss Ellen heard through her brother that he was going, and she made a little plan. She had not been being used at the man who wouldn't be heroic. In fact, she wanted to "make up." She would go on a mission. She wouldn't fish for fish but for Joe Harper. The lover of other happiness days was fishing from a small boat when she came into view, and he was on the other side of the stream. He watched her walk out on a stranded log and said to himself:

"If she gets a bite had better be pole she'll sure go off that log." Two minutes later the thing happened. There was a nibble, a jerk on a snout, and after the same a yet for Joe. He had been seen. The boat was only about three feet from him, as the girl gained her feet after the source she was called to:

"Don't get skeart, Ellen!" "Oh, Joe—Joe!" "You can wade ashore easy enough. Joe, I shall—shall!" "No, you won't."

In the six weeks following the net were ten to one that Joe and Ellen would never marry, but those who were the odds lamented it. The two met on the highway, and after pretending not to see each other they halted, and the girl said:

"Joe, I wanted to marry a hero." "Well, I ain't one." "I wanted to marry a hero, but I guess I'll have to take up with a great, big, good natured, stalwart farmer." "Looks that way to me, Ellen," smiled Joe, and that evening the marriage day was set.

Suits All Classes. The cigars we make and sell suits all classes of men. We have several brands of nickel cigars which are pronounced a superior article by smokers of good judgment. For the man who wants a finer cigar, we have the ten centers, which are as good a cigar as you can buy anywhere. There are men in North Platte who have smoked our cigars for over twenty-five years and are satisfied. That tells the story of the quality.
