

Republican Letter

From Headquarters Republican State Committee, Omaha, Neb.

The foundation of the campaign this fall is based upon the platform of the party unanimously adopted by the state convention at Lincoln. It is broad and liberal in its scope. The platform refers to what has been done by the republican party in the past, and pledges republicans to keep up the good work. Strongly and firmly, the platform endorses the national administration, commends the members of both branches of congress from Nebraska and endorses the state administration on the way affairs have been conducted by the chief executive and the republicans under him. Nebraska takes a great deal of pride in their railway commission, which was created by a republican legislature. The rights of the people have been safeguarded, and unjust discriminations have been held in restraint. The republican party rightfully claims credit for the railway commission as well as for various other progressive laws which have been of vital importance to the citizens of Nebraska and of direct benefit to them. The republican platform this year points with pride to our educational institutions and pledges its earnest support to the good work being done by the state university and agricultural college and schools. The party appeals to the citizenship of Nebraska for its candidates on the state ticket this fall. Back of them is a strong platform. They are the nominees of a party that has accomplished much for the state and the people. The party promises to maintain a high standard of efficiency and refers to its record to substantiate its promise.

The republican party of Nebraska is united in support of the entire state ticket this fall. The spirit of cooperation prevails in all parts of the state. Congressman George W. Norris of the Fifth congressional district, mindful of the fact that success to the republican party this fall means a great deal towards the party's success in the following campaign, says in speaking of the primary of next spring: "That campaign comes after this, and I have no disposition to bring next year's issues into this year's fight." Senator Norris Brown expressed the sentiment of harmony in the party, when he said: "The outlook for the election of the state ticket seems to me to be very good indeed. The personnel of the ticket has the confidence of the people, and the party seems to be united in its support. I am careful, so far as I am concerned, to keep my candidacy for re-election in the background in this campaign. I think the first duty of republicans is to attend to the election in hand and leave personal politics to be fought out next primary. The republican candidates for the bench have all been tested as judges, and all of them have demonstrated both ability and integrity—Judges Rose and Letton on the supreme bench and Judge Hamer on the district bench. The candidates for regent and railway commissioner are excellent men and will serve the people faithfully." No matter therefore what the issues may be in the primary or in the election of next year, the republicans are becoming deeply interested in the campaign of this year and are working harmoniously together for the success of the ticket. There is all the more reason for confining our energies to the pending campaign; because, under our recently enacted primary law, the people will express their individual preferences upon candidates next spring. Then, whoever the nominees may be, they should receive the loyal support of all republicans. It is none too early for republicans to make plans now for election day. The success of the party this year will make success certain next year, when party principles are at stake. Men, rather than measures, are important this year; both men and measures will be vitally important next year.

The republican state committee is pleased with the many expressions of good will and support coming from the rank and file of the party from all over the state. Republicans realize that to be lax in their efforts this fall means considerable of a sacrifice next year, when there is a president to be elected and Nebraska should be counted in the republican column. It is gratifying to the committee to find that the great majority of republicans have a sincere desire to get together and stay together. This feeling prevails generally throughout the state. Republican principles are just as true today as they ever have been. Men may differ somewhat in their application, but such differences can never seriously affect the party, or long divide the people who are proud of its achievements.

The voters are beginning to realize that under the primary law it is their duty to name the candidates, and the nominees so selected by the republican voters are certainly entitled to the support of all loyal republicans. Government by majorities is necessary under republican institutions, and as the selection of candidates is brought home to the people themselves, so likewise is the duty brought home to them to elect the men they have nominated. We cannot all agree upon candidates, but the majority may be as wise as any individual voter.

Myrtle and Vicinity. If lots of moisture in the fall is an indication of a good crop for the ensuing year, surely 1912 will give us a bumper crop. The old Burnes hall is to have an occupant at last. Mr. and Mrs. Otis Schintz are moving there this week. Mrs. Charlie Breternitz will move to North Platte in the near future, having traded her horses for property there.
