TRIUMPHANT OF AMERICAN DIPLOMACY.

The great German paper the Frankfort Zeitung in its issue of Dec. 10, in discussing the success of the American policy of reciprocity, speaks of "triumphant shouts of victory coming from the United States," and says that the removal of restrictions against American pork and other recent changes made by Germany "represent a great victory for the American Union, a victory which costs the victor nothing—a conquest without a blow." The Zeitung then proceeds to pay a glowing tribute to "the superior commercial diplomacy of the trans-Atlantic state of the future over effete Europe, poor alike in blood and thought."

That this remarkable utterance of a great German paper is founded upon a correct and exact knowledge of the American doctrine of reciprocity is conclusively demonstrated by the article itself. The Zeitung supports its statements with a careful analysis of the doctrine of reciprocity as formulated by Mr. Blaine and as incorporated in Art. III of the McKinley tariff act, which it is constrained to say "has proven its eminent wisdom most brilliantly." It does not hesitate to say that "the commercial ideas of the American secretary of state are entirely original" and a great improvement over the methods by which Bismark has sought to obtain reciprocal trade for Germany.

With marked penetration and acuteness the Zeitung says: "While according to Bismark's system domestic interested parties became used to special high duties and formed a solid phalanx against and redactions or concession, Mr. Blaine's system causes the foreign reporter to profit by the reduction and makes of him a powerfully to force his (the foreign) government to make concessions to prevent the re-establishment of the American duties."

It does not escape the Zeitung that the same principle which has gained remarkable victories for the United States in Europe is proving equally successful in South America. As it says, "Mr. Blaine's idea has been successful in both cases." The Zeitung thinks, however, that the masterpiece of American diplomacy is shown in the way the principle of reciprocity has been used by the Harrison administration to open the German markets not only to American pork but also wheat, rye, bran, hops, butter, meat, and flour. It says "Germany has been forced to make the treaty, as France, Austria, and other sugar-producing countries will have to do very soon."

Every intelligent American citizen ought to read with care the entire article from the Frankfort Zeitung. It is the most remarkable tribute ever paid in the European press to American diplomacy, and more than that, it gives from a distant standpoint a better and more complete view of the republican doctrine of reciprocity than a certain element here at home has yet been able to take.

DURING eleven months in 1891 we exported to China 76,000,000 yards of cotton cloth. In the corresponding period in 1890 China took only 27,000,000 yards. If the tariff is ruining our industries, how is it that we have well nigh overcome the competition of free trade England in this open market of the world?—American Economist.

THE Atlanta Constitution expatiates on the beauties of an income tax, and says that "it must come." And yet we are told that "tariff reform" does not mean free trade.

A WESTERN paper says that there is a rumor afloat to the effect that an English syndicate has purchased the wind-mill plants of this country, and proposes to establish a trust. But the American workingman knows that English syndicates already control the wind-mill plants of this country—the free trade newspapers.

La Grippe.
