HENRY BORCE.

On Friday, par 24m instant, at noon, after an illust of about seven months, Fred H. second son of Mr. and Mrs. H.

D. He haway, of this city, passed a way trace that almost without a struggle. Since February last, when the con traction of what seemed for a time to be no more serious than an ordinary cold took Fred away from his desk in the Journal counting room, nothing has been left undone to stay the progress of his disease that human skill, foresight and experience could suggest. The climate of southern California failed to give any relief, and though for a time after the return home there seemed to be a slight rally, nothing availed, and his steady and continuous decline from week to week has been so marked that his death, though occurring perhaps a fittle sooner than was anticipated by many of those who attended his bedside, was not unexpected.

On Friday morning a change for the worse was noticed, and he told his father that he feared he would not raily this time. Soon after, he called for his mother and the rest of the family, and bade them an affectionate farewerell. He soon after lost the power of articu-lation, but was evidently conscious to the last. Like his late elder brother, Charley, whose memory is cherished by a large circle of friends, Fred was a young man of the correctest principles and studi ous habits, with, to all appearances, up to his illness, a bright future and a long life before him. Affectionate, thoughtful of the comfort and happi ness of his parents and every member of his family, devoted to the domestic circle, a companion to his father and the stay of his mother, his untimery death carries with it the keenest sense of desolation and irreparable loss.

The sympathies of a large circle of friends and acquaintances for the family, a second time stricken within a few months, are warm and deep.

Fred Hampton Hathaway, was born in Nebraska City ov the 11th of August, 1883, and passed his twentieth year thirteen days before his death. Funeral services will be held from the residence of his parents, on the corner of M and Sixteenth streets, at 3 o'clock tomorrow (Sunday afternoon). -State Journal.

Many of our citizens will read with profound sorrow the foregoing account of the death of Freddie, son of our former citizens, Mr. and Mrs H. D. Hathaway. The writer of this mention has known "Fred,"-us he was familiarly called-from his infancy, to the date of his death; our last recollection of the fair featured, bright boy, was in his father's office, connected with the State Journal, a little over a year ago, when he had almost attained the stature of a did we then think that our friends who | linois for a few days. had just been called upon to mourn the loss of their eldest boy, would again be stricken down in the same

Fred was a bright, manly young man, t far more than ordinary promise, and Mr. and Mrs Hathaway, in their affliction, have the sincere sympathy of their large circle of friends and acquaintances at this, their old home.

A Strange and Bold Assault,

A bom assault was made in Council Bruffs, Thursday evening, upon a young may named Miss Addie Beggs, of St. Louis, who is visiting Mr. John Shickctanz and family, of that city. The residence is a large one, situated at the corner of Seventh avenue and Eighth street. The young lady went up stairs to her room early in the evening, the below. As she entered the door of her room, she was suddenly grasped by a ma. who quickly throwing his arm about her neck placed his hand on ner mouth preventing her from scream a handkerchief from her pocket and with the agility of an expert substituted this for his nand, gaging her securely, tying the handkerchief back of her head. He took from his pocket, or somewhere from his person, some strips of cloth, and tied one firmiy about her throat, choking her up so that she could hardly breathe. As she struggled and tried to hit him or push him off with her hands he grabbed those and speedity tied them behind her so firmly that she could not resist. As she tried to use her feet or kick him he placed his foot on her feet.

About this time one of the children who was playing down stairs fell, bumping its head, and some one of the tamny called out to the child "What's sailant evidently thinking that the fam- the family circle. Yours, ily had heard the struggle up stairs, and thinking an alarm had been caused pulled a revolver, and pointing it at the young lady, told her not to scream a command which in her condition she could not have disobeyed if she would. The fellow, still pointing his revolver at her said, "Lady, it isn't your money or your jewelry I want," and retreated down the stairs, still holding his revolver pointed at her over his left shoulder as he walked away. He went down the stairs three steps at a jump, hurridly unlocked the front door, and skipped out. Soon af er the young lady managed to work the gag loose enough to give three screams, all the family rushing to her and found her in the condition described. The bandage on her wrist had been tied so tight as to leave marks and almost bringing the blood. She was, of course, greatly excited, but parrated the incidents of the strange scribe the man in some respects. She says he was nearly six feet in height salt sort of a suit. She says he was either in his stocking feet or had rubbers on, as his footsteps even in going down the stairs could not be heard, and she noticed that his feet were encased in something soft as he stepped on her feet to keep her from kicking. She could not describe his features, how-
