AT RANDOM.

It is not the best things—that is the things which we call the best—that make men; it is not the pleasant things, it is not the calm experiences of life, it is life's rugged experiences, its tempests, its trials. The discipline of life is here good and there evil, here trouble and there joy, here rudeness and there smoothness, one working with the other, and the alterations of the one with the other, which necessitate adaptations and constitute part of that education which makes a man a man.

Mr. Cleveland has decided that he will not deny anything. This is wise. It is much better than being proven a liar.

The most important thing in dress is, incontestably the woman who wears it.

"No," said Cleveland to Hendricks, when they met the first time, "New York has not got the cholera, but it has Tammany." "So," said the Indiana statesman dubiously, "In my state an impression prevails that Tammany has New York."

It is good discretion not to make much of any man at the first, because one cannot hold out that proportion.

A father complaining of the way his children destroyed their clothing, said: "When I was a boy, I only had one suit of clothes and I had to take care of it. I was only allowed one pair of shoes in those days." There was a pause, and then a little chap spoke up. "I say, dad, you have a much easier time now you are living with us."

In order that the human race may progress, it must have proved lessons of courage permanently before it. To attempt, to brave, persist and persevere, to be faithful to one's self, to wrestle with destiny, to hold firm and withstand—such is the example which people need, and which electrifies them.

From selfishness men make severer laws for women than for themselves, without suspecting that by doing so they raise them above themselves.

The New York World opens wide eyes in wonder that the American people should object to a hangman for President, after voting in a Jackson, a Taylor, a Harrison, and a Grant. Think it over.

It seems to be the growing impression with the Kentucky State press that Henry Watterson wants Blaine elected President. Indeed, all through the South there is a happy feeling toward Blaine. He is so easy to get acquainted with, so generous to see in necessity, so fond of his many enemies, that when he is elected there will be a wonderful movement and procession from the South around his inauguration. They do not forget that his early days were spent in the South teaching school.

Often the virtue of woman must be very great, since it has to suffice for two.

A Philadelphia youth begged his girl to give him something he could wear next his heart. The sensible girl sent him a red flannel chest protector.

Grover Cleveland says that he has been a consistent democrat for twenty five years.

This, of itself unfit him to be President of the United States. In that period the most important questions in the history of the country have come up; on all of them the democratic party has been persistently and consistently wrong.

A man who has been wrong for a quarter of a century on every issue relating to the safety and welfare of this government, is said to be at the head of it.

We owe a debt to every great heart, to every fine genius—to those who have put life and fortune on the cast of an act of justice—to those who have refined life by elegant pursuits. It is the fine souls who elevate us, and not what is called fine society.

The objection to Cleveland that he once hung two men is said to be an aristocratic one. Not at all. The prejudice against a public executioner is as old as the world. It is plainly a revolt against the sensibilities. In England when the regular executioner was not on hand, and a neck tie party for Tyburn Hill was ready, it was the habit to offer a felon a free pardon if he would act in the place of the absent Jack Ketch. There are instances of men condemned to death who would not accept life on such terms.

Of course the prejudice does not exist to such an extent in this country, but still it is something of a relief to think that Erie county's hangman will not occupy the White House.

Every man has his chain and clog, only it is looser and lighter to one man than another, and he is more at ease, who takes it up, than he who drags it.

The most polished man in Omaha just now is a merchant, whose wife undertook to bathe him with balsam 'or the rheumatism. After the job was well done, she looked at the label of the bottle, and found out that it was furniture polish that she had been using.

"What is the color of the lace you have on?" asked a go-out-between the acts youth of a young lady at the theatre. "It is coffee tinted" she replied. "Do you think it is becoming?" he inquired. "Well I can't say, but I know it matches your breath."

That the Dem. National convention exhibited a spirit of contemptuous disregard for the wishes and feelings of Irish citizens, laid calmly and dispassionately before the leading men by representative Irishmen, who had a right to speak for their countrymen, was well illustrated by the expression of one delegate, heard by many Irish, "To hell with the Irish." The convention was ruled by a Know Nothing spirit, and its nominee must be defeated if that fell spirit is to be kept out of the National administration. Irishmen of spirit have no choice. Cleveland must be defeated and to do
