L. G. Larson,

Contractor and Builder
Sept. 12-6m.

Burglary.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 14.—A burglar entered the house of John Layne, a contractor, last night, and stole a suit of clothes, gold watch and chain, a check on the State national bank for $313, payable to John Lane, and a bank book. A liberal reward is offered for his arrest.

A Bank Robbed.

ST. JOHNSVILLE, N. Y., April 14.—The First national bank was robbed between 12 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Entrance was effected through the back window. The burglars blew off the vault and safe doors and carried off less than $10,000 in cash, $820 in un-singled bills, a gold watch and chain, valued at $175, together with other jewelry left at the bank for safe keeping. No trace of the burglars has been discovered.

The Nebraska Central Bridge.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The bill authorizing the Nebraska Central railroad company to construct a bridge across the Missouri river at Omaha was reported in the house today and referred to the private calendar. As the accompanying committee findings say that there is no objection to the measure except those made by the Union Pacific it is sure to pass the house without much opposition. The Central Nebraska company was organized about one year and a half ago, as an auxiliary to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, to construct an air line road from Omaha west through the center and most densely populated section of the state, and at one time the St. Paul had all arrangements about completed and was ready to begin work on a bridge when the Omaha & Council Bluffs bridge company stepped in and knocked them out.

Mr. Conkling's Condition Not Improved.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Dr. Anderson said this morning that Conkling rested well all night and slept quite as well as the night previous. He only awoke when called upon to take his medicine. The patient no longer walks the room as he did two days ago. He gets up at intervals and moves around, but not in the nervous and excited way he formerly did. "He has now passed out of the first acute stages of the disease," said the doctor, "and does not suffer the pain that he did at first. He has taken more nourishment last night than any previous night. The patient has not lost sixty pounds of flesh." About 10 this morning Dr. Barker issued a bulletin saying that Conkling passed a good night. He slept well and his mind is clearer this morning. Dr. Barker issued a bulletin at 2:30 this afternoon, saying that Conkling had been sleeping quietly for the last two hours and a half, and that there was a little improvement since this morning.
Dr. Anderson came out of the house at 6 o'clock, and when he was asked concerning the statement of Dr. Barker that Conkling was not doing so well this afternoon, said: "No, Conkling has lost some ground."
At 6:10 p. m. Henry Melville, Mr. Conkling's law partner, came out of the house and said there was no change in Conkling's condition. The family, he said, were very anxious. The physicians had predicted that Conkling would be better inside of three days. The prediction had not been fulfilled.
The general impression at the Hoffman house is that Conkling's condition is more precarious than indicated in the bulletins. While some of the bulletins have been favorable, yet there seems to be a world of reservation in all Dr. Barker has given out. On the other hand, not a favorable bulletin has been issued while the distinguished patient was otherwise than asleep. While awake he was very nervous, or even worse, excited. In the meantime his strength is receding hourly. Today came a most unfavorable symptom in his refusing to take milk, on which he has subsisted, and in a nervous twitching of the hands.
At 6:30 Dr. Barker said: "Since 5:30 p. m. there has been a change for the better. He has given up his twitching, and now takes milk. His wound has not been dressed today. I will be satisfied if there is no change for the worse before I call again at 11 p. m., and if I then find him the same I will go home and take a good night's rest."
Dr. Barker called shortly after 11 o'clock and stayed an hour. The patient fell asleep before the doctor left. He is still taking nourishment without difficulty, consisting of a little milk and whiskey. His temperature has risen slightly since the doctor's previous visit, otherwise he was unchanged.

Killed by a Falling Tree.

MEXICO, Mo., April 13.—Word reached this city this morning that John Buchanan, a pioneer of this section, aged 82 years, had been found dead in the woods near Thompson, with a heavy tree lying across his breast. Buchanan had been boarding around in the neighborhood west of Thompson Station, chopping saw-logs for a living. On last Saturday morning he started out as usual, saying he would return for dinner. He did come back, however, but he had been in the habit of spending nights at different houses in the locality nothing was thought of his absence until a day or two ago, when a search was instituted. This morning the body of the old man was found in a pasture, lying under a heavy tree.

A Hunter's Fatal Mistake.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 13.—Ben Davis, a colored man, and two young white men named Perry, went into the woods in Georgetown county, yesterday, to hunt wild turkeys. The party separated, and as it is customary in this kind of sport, one of the Perrys hid himself in the thick undergrowth and began gobbling like a turkey, to locate the game. His imitation was so clever that Davis, who was also hiding a few hundred feet away, mistook Perry's gobbling for that of a genuine bird and attempted to creep up on him. Perry mistook the stealthily approaching dork for a turkey and, firing away at him, the entire load of shot entered his face and breast, killing him instantly.

Scenes in Colombo, Ceylon.

Here comes striding through the press a gaunt, wild looking specter, nude to the waist, his huge bones seeming to start through his brown, leathery skin, and his fierce, black eyes glaring out beneath a forest of shaggy hair. There, with the slow step and stately bearing of a man who knows his own importance, comes a tall form with the shaven crown, long yellow robe, and red fan of a Buddhist priest, carrying his back in a moment to the barbaric temples and island monasteries of Siam. Then, perched in the eastern fashion astride of its mother's hip, with her arm around it, appears a native child—the prettiest little bronze statuette imaginable—with huge silver bangles glittering upon the dark skin of its tiny wrists and ankles, and all its splendid white teeth displayed in a constant laugh of wondering enjoyment at the surrounding stir and bustle.
And now we might appropriately sing "The Tamils are Coming," for round the corner file a perfect battalion of the famous Malabar race, whose conquest of Ceylon ages ago is one of the chief landmarks in its stormy history. Their snow white turbans and spotless tunics look delightfully cool and fresh in the blistering glare of the noonday sun; but their faces, though smooth and sleek as that of a Greek statue, have an unmistakable coarseness in the outline of their broad, blunt noses and thick lips which would contrast very unfavorably with the small, delicate, sharply cut features of a genuine Hindoo. Next passes at all Malay in the white "baju" (jacket) and particolored "sarong" (close fitting skirt) of his national costume, looking doubly picturesque by contrast with the queer nondescript garb of a group of caste women, whose shabby black European gowns and ill shaped hats add something even to the ugliness which beautiful nature has so lavishly bestowed upon them. Then advances a short, stout Cingalese, whose thick black hair is gathered into a kind of club on the top of his head and fastened there with a huge crescent shaped comb of tortoise shell.—Ceylon Cor. New York Times.

Modern System of Advertising.

The honest system of advertising should be but a small announcement of the offer of goods for the information of those who desire to purchase, in such a manner that those who desire to purchase, may, by seeking, find. But in advertising as it now exists, exaggeration is piled on exaggeration, and falsehood is added to falsehood. The world is filled with monstrous lies, and they are thrust upon attention by every possible means. The mails are filled with them. When a man opens his mail in the morning, the letter of his friend is buried among these advertising monstrosities. They are thrust under street doors, and they are offered you as you walk the streets. When you read the morning and evening papers, they are spread before you with typographic display, they are placed among the items you desire to read, and they are given false headings, and they begin with devery headings. They are posted upon walls, and on the fences, and on the sidewalks, and on bulletin boards, and the barns and house-tops with them, and they are nailed to the tree and painted on rocks. Thus it is that the whole civilized world is placarded with lies, and the moral atmosphere of the world wrecks with the foul breath of this monster of antagonistic competition.—Mag. J. W. Powell.

Better Cooks Than Women.

Not perhaps for the same reason that great chefs are men, but because one of the most striking phases of the civilization of today develops itself in that direction, men are getting to be better cooks than women. They have always been better gastronomers. But the man about town, the luxurious idler who breakfasts at Delmonico's, lunches at the Brunswick or at Savarin's and dines at Solari's, actually knows, as a rule, more about the constituents of the dishes on the menu, and how they are put together and heated to achieve a desirable result, than any woman he is ever likely to meet there or elsewhere. There isn't one woman in a hundred who can go into a restaurant such as those and order what a man would call "a decent meal." Women who have traveled, seen much of life as their husbands and brothers see it, owe a vast deal of their popularity to their acquired ability to know just what's what across a table a deux.—New York Press "Every Day Talk."
