THE PONTOON BRIDGE.

THE HERALD has always zealously favored every feasible scheme for the improvement and building up of the city, and has generally met with a hearty support of our business men.

We were compelled during last year at times, to make uncomplimentary notices of some members of the city council, for the reason that some of them were afflicted with enlarged ideas of their own importance, and at times would very indifferently treat the petitions of the taxpayers, but our city legislature, since last year, has been vastly improved, and THE HERALD hopes the wants of the people will not be misunderstood.

Our people have a proposition that is both feasible and fair for the building of a pontoon bridge across the river before them, which THE HERALD believes should be accepted without delay.

The rich farm lands lying within seven or eight miles of this city on the east side of the river would be immediately tributary to our town, while a great deal of trade would be drawn from further points. The price of hay and several other farm products would be greatly lessened.

There is not a housekeeper in Plattsmouth but pays almost every day for butter, eggs, chickens, apples or potatoes, or some other vegetable, a higher price than would be paid if we could get the produce from the east side of the river. Quite a number of Pacific Junction people come here to trade at the present time, buying our better class of dry goods and groceries.

We believe the advantages to be gained from the water power furnished will be well worth considering. Mr. Stewart has over $15,000 deposited right now in our city banks, but he claims he is not here for his health, and to our way of thinking Mr. Stewart, to make the bridge a success for himself financially, must depend on something else besides the travel; he must know what he is about and to a great extent be depending on the renting of the power which he will obtain.

As an advertisement alone, two thousand dollars a year is far less than either Hastings, Beatrice or Grand Island have expended. We realize we have not got the live people they have got in those towns, but we think we have some sufficiently wide-awake to see the great advantages to be derived from the securing of the bridge.

DOOMED TO DISAPPOINTMENT.

The democratic newspapers of the east announce with a ridiculous assumption of bravado that a part of their campaign this year will be directed to the capture of the United States senate. As the case now stands, with Mr. Barbour, of Virginia, elected to succeed Mr. Riddleberger, and supposing that there are no other changes, the next senate will be a tie. With a democratic vice president that party will control the upper house of congress; but the democrats don't propose to be satisfied with this. They are hoping to capture the legislature of Oregon, which is to be elected in June, and choose the successor to Senator Dolph, whose term expires next March. Michigan is another state to which the democrats are looking with hopes born of Postmaster General Dickenson. The only state in which they believe it possible for them to lose a senator is New Jersey, and on that contingency are speculating anxiously. Some recent movements in that state prove that the administration is trying to conciliate Senator McPherson to unite the democratic factions.

Our democratic friends are almost certainly doomed to disappointment. There is a much greater probability that the republicans will gain control of the lower house than the democrats will secure a majority in the senate.—Gazette-Journal.

CAPTAIN H. E. PALMER, of Plattsmouth, is receiving favorable mention for delegate at large from this state to the national republican convention. The captain is well qualified for the position and would prove an honest and capable delegate. We have no doubt but the old soldiers and republicans generally of this county would be glad to see him chosen.—Tecumseh Chieftain.

A DEMOCRATIC club at Kansas City has just determined to go in a uniformed body to the national convention at St. Louis. They will wear linen dusters, white plug hats and a red cane. The news item doesn't so state, but the natural inference is they will also wear red noses. In November they will all be blue.—Fremont Tribune.

THE Mexicans are congratulating themselves upon the fact that their Secretary of State, Senor Mariscal has gained a pronounced advantage over our Secretary Bayard in the correspondence concerning the Cutting indemnity case; but then a man needn't be much of a diplomatist in order to get the advantage of Mr. Bayard.—Globe Democrat.

THE PHOTOGRAPHER.

A FEW PRACTICAL HINTS ESPECIALLY FOR THE LADIES.

Always Listen to the Suggestion of the Artist—How to Make the Best of an Unhandsome Countenance—Short Necks and Long.

First decide what style you will have—first, three-quarter figure, or full length. The first two are the prevailing modes, the last implying a more elaborate toilet. Now secure your sitting. It is always better to do so, thus obviating the annoyance of waiting. Before leaving the studio, unless the appointment is made by letter, consult the photographer as to your dress, etc.

While you are talking with him about dress he is studying your face, expression and form generally. If he also be an artist, and experienced, he may see at a glance that your customary way of dressing the hair is not becoming, for, strange as it may seem, comparatively few women have the knack of arranging their hair in the mode demanded by their face.

What is this "nervous trouble" with which so many seem now to be afflicted? If you will remember a few years ago the word Malaria was comparatively unknown,—today it is as common as any word in the English language, yet this word covers, only the meaning of another word used by our forefathers in times past. So it is used with nervous diseases, as they and Malaria are intended to cover what our grandfathers called Biliousness, and all are caused by troubles that arise from a diseased condition of the Liver which in performing its functions finding it cannot dispose of the bile through the ordinary channel is compelled to pass it off through the system causing nervous troubles, Malaria, Bilious Fever, etc. You who are suffering can well appreciate a cure. We recommend Green's August Flower. Its cures are marvelous.

Effects of the Climate. Tradition tells of a young English recruit who was sent out to garrison duty in Ceylon soon after his enlistment, and beheld with great amazement (having never seen a colored man before) the first native who boarded the transport when the cast anchor in Colombo harbor. "Who's that black chap, Bill?" asked he of a comrade. "What! don't you know him again?" answered the other, who was a bit of a wag; "why, that's our old chum, Harry Thompson, that you used to know in the old country. He's been out here five years, you know, and the sun's toasted him black." "The sun's toasted him black?" echoed the greenhorn, staring in open-mouthed horror at the supposed transformation. "Do you mean to say that I'll be like that when I've been here five years?" "Of course you will, Dick," replied his tormentor, with heartless cheerfulness, "and so'll I too, and so'll all of us. Look at that chap," (pointing to a passing Chinese boatman,) "he's only yellow you see, because he hasn't got more than half toasted yet, but in another year or two he'll be as black as your boots."—David Ker in New York Times.

The Last Half Century.

Men of science who live today have almost created a new world. To go back fifty years is to go back to the slow processes of thought and labor, that in this rushing time seem incomparably tedious and slow. The last half century has witnessed the greatest of American inventions—the mower and reaper, the rotary printing press, the sewing machine, the India rubber industry, the horse shoe machine, the sand blast for carving the grain elevator, the gauge lathe, the telephone, the electric magnet. Strip the world of these today and how greatly progress would be retarded.—Albany Journal.

No remedy in the world has gained the popularity that this medicine has, as a hold on family medicine. No one should be without it. A FEW PRACTICAL HINTS ESPECIALLY FOR THE LADIES.

Always Listen to the Suggestion of the Artist—How to Make the Best of an Unhandsome Countenance—Short Necks and Long.

First decide what style you will have—first, three-quarter figure, or full length. The first two are the prevailing modes, the last implying a more elaborate toilet. Now secure your sitting. It is always better to do so, thus obviating the annoyance of waiting. Before leaving the studio, unless the appointment is made by letter, consult the photographer as to your dress, etc.

While you are talking with him about dress he is studying your face, expression and form generally. If he also be an artist, and experienced, he may see at a glance that your customary way of dressing the hair is not becoming, for, strange as it may seem, comparatively few women have the knack of arranging their hair in the mode demanded by their face. While he knows that the portrait must not be ruined by the hair being done up in an unfamiliar way, he may yet give you a few invaluable suggestions. For instance, he may request you to be more careful in dressing the left side than the right, thus signifying that the left side of the face is better. Few have both sides alike. There is often almost as much difference as between two persons. The nose is much or a little to one side; one eye is smaller, because one lid droops more; there is a depression over that spot where a tooth has been extracted. The uneven shaping of the lips alone may decide which side of the face should be prominent. You laugh rather to one side—and, by the by, there is always something pretty about such a laugh—and you have developed a dimple, which, sad experience teaches the photographer, will be demanded of him. But, as it happens sometimes, he may fail to detect the slightest difference between the right and left, but he still requests you to take special pains with a certain side of the hair, as he prefers to show that side of the face. This is because in every atelier the light is better at one end of the room than at the other, and he is accustomed to place his sitters there.

Now, and not when you come to sit, is the time for you to tell him what you prefer. You wish a three-quarter face, or a front view, or a profile; you have studied the idiosyncrasies of your face for years, and have so decided. He listens respectfully, but his eye has searched out all the little secrets of anatomy, and fathomed your hidden reasons for thus and so. You are afraid of that cheek bone; you do not say so, but he knows it, and is studying how to retire it and lose it in the tinting of the background. You are conscious of those ears; they are large, and stand well out. A photographer knows how formidable an antagonist is an ear that projects at right angles from the head; he knows that right is usually but one way to subdue it, and smiles inwardly at your emphatic demand for a full front, which means that both ears shall show equally. When he says "full face" he means a pose that almost or entirely loses one ear. Perhaps you insist that he do not make you a profile; you often rejoice that you live in an age when silhouette profiles are out of fashion. The prominence of your nose forbids it, or a long chin puts it out of the question. A side face is just the thing for you; the photographer sees it at a glance for, again, strange as it may appear, the possibilities for a profile do not depend so much upon the features as upon the hair and neck dressing. A slight tip to the head one way or the other lengthens or foreshortens the features, and the photographer, in manipulating his light and shade, may refine or render them stronger at will. He will tell you not to arrange the hair till you come to the studio, for a very short distance, especially in damp or blistering weather, will ruin it. He will probably request you not to dress the neck too high or too tight, or in an exact circle, with the fore part of it lying close under the chin, for, of all things, the present high mode of dressing the neck is distressing to an artistic photographer. It is done because the lady has a short neck or a long one, or it is thin, and the cords must be concealed. It is done, for it is the fashion. This is all a mistake. You are surprised when the photographer says it, for there is a touch of bitterness in his tone. He illustrates his meaning by winding the laps of his coat tightly around his neck. "You see, madam, the effect on a long face like my own. It overhangs and becomes almost deformed, while a round face becomes button shaped, and none of the little tricks of hair dressing or expression can remedy it. No; it's all a mistake. If your neck is short, as you say, do not look at it; wear, lower, the drapery, not a little judicious borrowing, and presto! the face that was round becomes oval. In any case the neck must not be hidden, for all the action and grace of position in a bust portrait centers there."

Never ask your friend to enter the operating room with you. It embarrasses the artist, and is almost certain to ruin your expression; in fact, few photographers will allow any one to enter the glass room with the sitters. Remember that the brightest light is the worst light you can have. Choose, if possible, a day with an overcast sky; a snowy day is excellent. The early part of the day is to be preferred, say between the hours of 10 and 12 a. m., and then the light is more active, and the photographer has not been wearied by a score of sittings. Black, dark green, crimson, brown and yellow take nearly the same shade. A dress cut low in the neck always seems much higher in a photograph than to an observer. A masculine face is softened and refined by a soft neck dressing, a bit of lace being preferable to the stiff standing collar.—Harper's Bazar.

An Inaudible Laugh. In one of his letters to the beautiful Theodosia, Aaron Burr implored his daughter to cultivate an inaudible laugh, and that is precisely what fashionable women are doing in Chicago. The training is individual, and may be pursued to suit the face, features and fancy of the anti-laughter, who, mirror in hand, studies her glass continually. If the chin is pretty in contour and modeling and teeth white, the pupil must learn to laugh with her lips, but wear a rigid brow and steady eyes. Are the teeth unsightly, then she will have a woful time, for the mouth must be kept closed, and how to laugh with the eyes and not wrinkle the face is a task. Handbooks and teachers of the art of expression tell the students to train the eyes to smile, and caution them against the habit of tightly closing the eyes when a pleasing sensation is felt, a habit which prematurely wrinkles the lower lids and works worse than the corners of the eyes.—Chicago Inter Ocean.
