Republican State Convention.

The republican electors of the state of Nebraska are requested to send delegates from their several counties to meet in convention at the city of Lincoln Thursday, August 23, 1888, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following state offices: Governor.

Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Auditor of Public Accounts.
Attorney General.
Commissioner of Public Lands and Buildings.

And the transaction of such other business as may come before the convention.

THE APPOINTMENT.

The several counties are entitled to representation as follows, being based upon the vote cast for Hon. Samuel Maxwell, judge, in 1887, giving one delegate at large to each county, and for each 150 votes, and major fraction thereof:

It is recommended that no proxies be admitted to the convention except such as are held by persons residing in the counties from which the proxies are given.

To Chairmen County Central Committees:

WHEREAS, At the republican state convention held at Lincoln October 5, 1887, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the state central committee be instructed to embrace in its call for the next state convention the submission of the prohibition question to the republican voters at the republican primaries.

Therefore, in accordance with the above resolution, the several county central committees are hereby instructed to include in their call for their next county convention the submission of the prohibition question to the republican voters at the republican primaries.

THE bandana supplies to the democracy a long felt want. They have now something to blow on. It will be quite a saving to some of their coat sleeves.—Arizona Citizen.

THE red silk bandanner is made in England. The new democratic silk badges introduced in New York are made in England. The democratic tariff plank was manufactured in England. The democratic shroud will be furnished next fall by England. The mourners over the sad fate of Cleveland and Thurman will be found in England. There is no denying the appropriateness of all this.—Express.

THERE is a man living among the mountains of Tennessee who will be 214 years and 7 months old on the 4th day of next July. He stands erect and one day last week, on a wager, ran 60 miles in 54 minutes, beating a limited express train. The engineer of the train was so mortified at the result that he resigned. The veteran felt none the worse for his run and celebrated his victory by jumping over a five-barred gate and eating a large number of consecutive quail. His hearing, eyesight, and taste for tobacco are as good as they ever were. P. S. This story is not founded on fact, but we cheerfully place it at the disposal of the earnest democratic editors who are endeavoring to make out that Thurman is rather a giddy young thing than otherwise.—N. Y. Tribune.

PROHIBITION IN IOWA.

The mayor of Keokuk has become tired of the saloons running in that city in violation of the law. He is teaching the delinquent mayors of Iowa that the law can be enforced. The following is the proclamation which can not be misunderstood:

KEOKUK, June 2.—To the ex-Saloonkeepers: In March last you were notified that on and after May 1st you would not be allowed by the city authorities to further violate the law. Some of you have since sold liquor—some openly and others clandestinely.

"The seizures and arrests made Friday by the police are simply the beginning. No mercy will be shown to any offender, and that you may labor under no delusion I want to say that all the machinery of the law will be put in operation against all violators of the law.

"I will not wait for cases to be appealed and allow you to sell while waiting the slow process of the courts. All liquors will be seized, and arrests will be made daily, and hourly if necessary. You have had the greatest leniency shown you heretofore but hereafter justice only will be given you.

"You must choose for yourselves whether you will obey the law or take punishment. You must do the one or submit to the other.

"You must remember you have to deal now with the legally constituted executive power of the city and its police, and not with individuals nor with the preambles and resolutions of a temperance convention.

"The law will be rigidly enforced if an officer has to be placed in every room attempted to be used as a saloon in the city.

JOHN N. IRWIN, Mayor.

DON'T FORGET IT.

The winning man has never been nominated at Saint Louis. The superstitious man in the White House wants to pass this notice in the crown of his hat for reference next November.

The Undertaker's Business Troubles.

The undertaker has his business troubles the same as the man who makes pantaloons, and coats, and vests on thirty days' time. The latter has his way of collecting the bill some time. The undertaker cannot pursue with much comfort or assurance of success. Many of the people who have occasion to call on the undertaker belong to what is called the better class. They live up to their income and then jump over it. The demands of society keep them on the run. The madame must appear as well attired as the banker's family. It is the same old story of keeping up appearances. So that when some member of the family dies the funeral must be in accordance with the mode of the living. Death has its dance. These people call on the undertaker to furnish the music.

In a case of this kind the undertaker has no time to look up credits or bank accounts. The casket is furnished as ordered. The attendant accessories are at hand as required. The undertaker is a humanitarian. He could not withhold what he has if he would. To be merciful is a part of his stock in trade. When the casket is put under the sod there is no way to get it back, and even if there were who would buy a second hand coffin? The account mildews on the books, society keeps up its inexorable demand on the living, the income won't reach and the dead sleep on in debt. It would surprise you to know how many unpaid coffins there are over which there are costly monuments, with fine reading carved thereon.—Chicago Times.

The Wooden Barge Must Go.

Iron barges are destined to soon take the place of wooden ones on the western waters. A firm is now preparing to build a large number of iron barges for the transportation of coal between Pittsburg and St. Louis. If successful it will do away entirely with wooden barges. Work will be commenced on the new barges in a few weeks. Each barge will have a carrying capacity of 30,000 bushels of coal, and will draw eight feet when loaded. They will be constructed of the very heaviest boiler iron, and will cost in the neighborhood of $1,300 each. A class of workmen—the caulkers along the rivers—are deeply interested and solicitous, for the reason that if the iron boats are a success, Pittsburg men in Globe-Democrat.

$500 Reward.

We will pay the above reward for any case of liver complaint, dyspepsia, sick headache, indigestion, constipation or costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Large boxes containing 30 sugar coated pills, 25c. For sale by all druggists. Beware of counterfeits and imitations. The genuine manufactured only by John O. Will & Co., 862 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill. Sold by W. J. Warrick.

"Riding the Yellow Pony."

In the Founders' day procession in New Haven one of the "Honorarium school boys" led a yellow pony. Few knew the significance of the pony until it was explained that Mr. Lovell, the old schoolmaster, used to discipline his pupils by laying them out, face downward, on the yellow school desks and applying a rawhide where it would do the most good. This he called "riding the yellow pony." It is said that the man who led the pony in the procession deserved the honor, for he once, when a boy, rode the yellow pony twenty-four times in one day.—New York Sun.

A Warning.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from disease of the throat and lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of Tubercle Germs into the system and where these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the lungs producing Consumption and to the head, causing Catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to continue will in time cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your throat, lungs or nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boshue's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief.

THE DEADLY DRUGS

WHICH ARE COMING INTO USE IN PLACE OF ALCOHOL.

What New York City Druggists Say on the Subject—The Mania for Treating One's Own Ailments—Narcotics, Stimulants and Soporifics.

An up town druggist who was spoken to about the subject said: "I sell a good deal of both chloroform and ether without prescriptions, but I don't consider that, so long as my drugs are not intended for suicidal employment or murder, I have any right to ask what is going to be done with them. I know what the law is, but deem that a druggist must exercise some discretion in conforming to it. Why, a majority of the things on my shelves, things not commonly classed as poisons, either, a person could kill himself with if he were fool enough to take too much of them. And here's a 'respect that gives us pause' when we think of strictly applying the law. A great many persons are told by their physicians to take this or that medicine, do so, find themselves bettered or cured; subsequently have a recurrence of the old symptoms, and, remembering what did them good before, come around and demand it. Very possibly the druggist knows them, understands why they want the drug, or has sense enough to understand that they are telling the truth when they make a frank statement of the situation. What is the apothecary to do? Even if the man wants a deadly poison, he knows how to take it, wants it for a good reason, and is bound to get it somewhere. Would my refusing him make him go off and get a prescription? No, unless, unless mine was the only drug store in town. Another thing: 'I don't believe there are any people in the world who have such a mania for treating their own ailments and exchanging recipes as Americans have. Every street is full of men who have attended medical lectures with the idea of being doctors, and who have abandoned that purpose, but still think they know enough of medicine to treat their own maladies and advise their friends. And, of course, with the American disposition to play every hand for all it is worth, they have little confidence in anything but the most powerful drugs. So from these various directions comes a more or less legitimate and certainly honest demand for my 'cold pills,' and I just use my own best judgment, in each individual case, about supplying it.

"I have a good deal of call for hydrate of chloral, but hardly so much as a few years ago, when it was a fashion. Bromide of potassium is also in good, steady, and, I fancy, increasing demand among ladies with weak nerves and gentlemen of super-civilized habits. The use of morphine is, I should say, increasing, while that of laudanum and the crude opium is falling off. When I say 'use' I mean improper use of course, and when I speak of a diminished demand for the crude opium I except the kind used for smoking, which is altogether different from the medicinal sort. That does not pass through my hands at all, and about the call for it I know nothing. Morphine is generally used hypodermically. It is now practicable to get a complete outfit for that vice as cheaply as seventy-five cents, and that, together with certain supposed advantages in that method of administration, has popularized the habit. Tens of thousands of persons of whom you would never suspect it are addicted to the vice. 'Coasting' No. There are few, or, I may say, no demands for it, except from doctors, some of whom, I regret to say, have got into the habit of demanding it altogether too frequently. Drugs accredited with a power of stimulation of the stomach, heart or nervous system—especially the latter—are more and more commonly used. You would be astonished could you know how many persons have contracted a habit of using capsicum, ginger, calisaya, strychnia, quinine, digitalis, phosphorus, and the thousand and one nostrums compounded for stimulative purposes. I verily believe that at least one person in every hundred in the community has contracted a confirmed habit. 'Cannabis Indica' No. There is but little call for it, even in prescriptions, for the reason, I think, that invaluable as it is when fresh, of full strength, and reliable, its active principle is so volatile that you never are sure of what its effects will be. Could it be depended upon it would be one of the least injurious and most agreeable of the intoxicants.

Another druggist said: "I used to sell a great deal of narcotic, soporific and stimulant drugs while clerking in a big Broadway store, but in this new place of my own not much, as yet. No, I don't suppose it is because people have stopped taking them, not by any means, but simply for the reason that I have not yet been here long enough for them to get to know me and feel that they can approach me with confidence. Persons who are habitual users of drugs generally get to be quite secretive about their vice, you know. I do, however, sell a vast deal of a very excellent bitter calisaya cordial that I put up myself; and another preparation, a tonic, containing phosphorus, strychnia and some other valuable ingredients. Both are sold at my soda fountain, and two out of every three persons at least of those who call for soda will have one or the other, or sometimes both of those preparations. I even have customers who stop every morning and get vials of them to take down town to their offices for use during the day, and who stop at night and leave the empty vials to be refilled for the next day. At night, at home they have big bottles to draw from if they want to keep up their stimulation.

The mention of the opium smokers by the preceding druggist suggested the inquiry of an exceptionally clever literary man, who was casually met one day at Yuet Sing's store, "whether the breaking up of the 'joints' had diminished opium smoking in New York?" "Not at all," he replied; "there is more of it now than there ever was before. It is simply carried on with more secrecy, that is all. The pale faced barbarian has not the ghost of a show to run John Chinaman in his way. The Mongol is too cunning. If he wants to smoke opium he will smoke opium, and the only way to make him stop it is to kill him. But it is by no means Chinamen alone who 'hit the pipe.' There are more Mexican men and women in New York addicted to the habit than there are Chinamen who practice it, and they are by no means 'the offscourings of society'—to quote the pet phrase of the people who want everybody else to live in their way. Very respectable men, yes, and women, too, smoke opium. And the 'joints' are not closed. Those known to the police are, it is true, but I, who am recognized as one who occasionally 'hits the pipe' and can be trusted, could show you a dozen places where you might smoke the wad of Oriental delight in any degree of style you pleased."

A German druggist, who developed in conversation a conscientiousness almost as big as his ears or his feet, would not even talk about the use of drugs otherwise than by prescription, lest he might be violating the law. He knew nothing about such things, he said, and was scandalized and horrified beyond measure when the writer asked him for some "1.30 grain strychnia pellets." All he could stammer in reply was: "Go owit! Go owit!"—New York Sun.

The present year bids fair to be a disastrous one from tornadoes and wind storms. This is fore-shadowed by the number of storms we have already had—the most destructive one so far this year having occurred at Mt. Vernon, Ill., where a large number of buildings were destroyed or damaged. The exemption from tornadoes last year renders their occurrence more probable in 1888.
