THE WAR IN KANSAS.

Governor Martin Orders Militia to the Scene of the Trouble.

TOPEKA, Kas., August 3.—Attorney General Bradford and General Myers have returned from Stevens county, and made a report to Governor Martin. After hearing the report and recommendations of the officers the governor was satisfied that the civil authorities were powerless to preserve good order in Stevens county, and that the introduction of militia into that section of the state would be warranted, and therefore decreed that the Second Brigade, K. N. G., and Second Battery of Topeka, with a gun, proceed there post haste, and his order was sent out by telegraph. The eight companies rendezvoused at Hutchinson to-night, and leave there at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning for Liberal. Complaints have been filed with United States Commissioner Wilson which charge Robinson and his party with the murder of Cross and his posse.

Remarkable Springs.

CENTRAL CITY, Neb., Aug. 3.—This town may soon have a fame like that of Colfax and Waukesha. On the bank of a slough on the farm of P. C. Moore, two miles west of here, are several springs. They have been known to exist for years, but it was not until very recently that their waters gave evidence of curative powers. Philip Donahue, aged about fifty years, has suffered much from rheumatism, and recently tried drinking and bathing in them. He now avers that he feels like a new man. When he commenced using the water his hands were covered with warts, which have now disappeared. Whether anything will be done to develop these springs or whether their waters really possess healing powers is as yet a matter of conjecture, but many people are taking quite an interest in them. Others beside Donahue will testify to relief from rheumatism after using the water.

Bitton By a Rattlesnake

BLAIR, Neb., August 3.—Charley Emery the twelve-year-old son of William Emery living about six miles west of this place, was just brought to town by his father to be treated for a rattlesnake bite. The boy was working in the harvest field barefooted, and on raising his foot to take a step was struck by the snake in the heel. He is suffering terrible agony and may not recover. The wound is being cauterized by the doctor and the boy is being dosed with whiskey.

BAD BLOOD.

There is not one thing that puts a man or woman at such disadvantage before the world as a vitiated state of the blood. Your ambition is gone. Your courage has failed. Your vitality has left you. Your languid step and listless actions show that you need a powerful purifier, one bottle of Beggs' Blood Purifier and Blood Maker will put new life in a worn out system, and if it does not it will cost you nothing. O. P. Smith & Co., Druggists.

Ladies' Attention;

Recamier Toilet Preparations which include Cream, Balm, Moth and Freckle Lotion, Powder and Toilet Soap, are sold only by Gering & Co., and recommended by the following society ladies: Mesdames Adelina Patti-Nicolini, James Brown Potter, Lillie Langtry, Sarah Bernhardt, Helena Modjeska, Fanny Eavenport, Clara Louise Kellogg and one hundred others.—if.

Wm. Hays, Secretary,

DAUGHTERS OF EVE.

Queen Victoria's favorite color is blue. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt pays her physician $10,000 a year.

Emily Faithful decries the "shabby genteel" idea that work is degrading for women.

Miss Edna Dean Proctor has given a drinking fountain to her native town, Hemiker, N. H.

Miss Ames, daughter of the governor of Massachusetts, is said to look wonderfully like the Princess of Wales.

"Jenny" is one of the baptismal names of the new empress of Germany. That has a pleasant, homelike sound.

The death of ex-Empress Carlotta, of Mexico, may occur at any moment in Belgium. She is rapidly sinking and has become entirely helpless.

Some forty-three descendants of Rebecca Nourse, "the pious witch of 1692," picnicked in her honor at Danvers Center, Mass., the other day.

Miss Agnes Brown Blackwell, a daughter of Rev. Antoinette L. Brown Blackwell, was awarded the highest prize in the "life class" at Cooper Union at its late annual examination.

A school of house-keeping has been started in Brussels by the countess of Flanders. Forty girls there receive a practical training in domestic economy, marketing, cooking, mending and laundry.

An Englishman thus describes Queen Margherita of Italy in the Pall Mall Gazette: "Her face is so spontaneously interesting and vigorous that it might belong to any high born lady untrammelled by cares of state. Her smile, her bow, her ready words are the perfection of royal art, or, perhaps, rather the unlearned perfection of a royal nature."

The Journal du Havre has found the acte de naissance of Sarah Bernhardt. She was born in 1834 at Havre. Her mother was the daughter of a Berlin oculist, and her father was a government official, who afterward committed suicide. Sarah's original name was Rosalie. This disposes of the story that she was Dutch.

Princess Irene of Hesse, who has just married Prince Henry of Prussia, has received a thorough housewife's training. She can sew, make bread, and do everything she would have to do were she fated to become the wife of a poor man. All the Princesses of Hesse were trained in this way by their mother, the late grand duchess, daughter of Queen Victoria.

The French minister of war has decided to award the cross of the Legion of Honor to Mme. Drouan at the coming July fete. She was the faithful attendant of the Fifty-ninth regiment of infantry during the war of 1870, behaving with the utmost valor during the battles about Metz and attending to the officers and men, even when they were under a heavy fire, until she was taken prisoner.

Preserve the Government Landmarks.

There is surprising recklessness regarding the preservation of monuments erected by the government surveyors throughout the northwest. The surveyor of Brown, county, Dakota, gives this timely warning in a local paper: I notice a lamentable want of care of the government corners among the farmers and landowners of the country. Where stakes existed they are rotted off, often pulled out and used for firewood; the mounds are grazed by cattle or travel, the pits are filled up and obliterated, and soon, if not already, no certain evidence will remain of their exact location. Now I need not enlarge on the very great importance of preserving these points to mark on boundary lines. Residents from the east can recall any amount of trouble arising from some "lost corner," doubts, disputes, litigation and perchance a big surveyor's bill. Therefore, let every one of these corners receive the prompt attention necessary to make it definite and permanent. Since each corner has an individuality of its own, owing to the marked irregularities of the government surveys, it is a mistake to think that a lost corner may readily be restored by measurements from adjacent corners. For enduring monuments I would suggest a pointed stone or iron rod, or where practicable plant a tree. To forestall any subsequent dispute two or more of the adjacent owners should unite in the planting of the corner. I would caution roadmasters against carelessness in destroying or burying too deeply these landmarks.—Chicago Times.

A Test of Good Breeding.

Traveling is one of the severest tests of good breeding; and whoever leaves home to go to the seaside or to the mountains, does well to bear this fact in mind. At the places of summer resort, too, people are more in danger of making disadvantageous, or even objectionable, acquaintanceships than they are at their own homes, from the very fact that here all the world meets on a more familiar footing; and as every person is a stranger to every other, people of doubtful character or reputation in their native places, often succeed in passing themselves off for what they are not, in the crowd of a watering place.

All this is so thoroughly recognized at Newport and other large and exclusive summer resorts that a stranger, genteel or otherwise, will find great difficulty in making any acquaintances among the "summer people," as they are called. If he have no friend to introduce him, and bring no letter of introduction, he need not hope to join in the gaiety which he sees around him. He is only a spectator, and probably leaves his hotel at the end of August, thoroughly disgusted with the invisible but firm barriers which have excluded him from the charmed circle.—Demorest's Magazine.

LOVE'S FAITH.

If we should come and tell me that the birds had lost their voices and that the flowers no more gave forth soft odors; that for lack of dew the grass blades drooped at dawn time; that the shells

Had left the ocean's shore, the pearls its bed;
That frost and fruitage had congenial grown;
That the lost sister of the Pleiades
Had reappear'd in Taurus; that the sun
Had wheel'd his golden chariot to the north;
If one should come and tell me this, dear love,
I might believe him. But if one should come
And tell me you were false; why, I should stand
With folded arms, and dart thro' him a glance
So keenly edged with scornful diabolical
That lack he would recoil like April clouds
Before the advancing sun, and call upon
The mantle of his wrath to cover him.
—Orelia Key Bell in Detroit Free Press.

THE BALKAN PENINSULA.

Conservative Ideas of the Turkish Women—Thomas Stevens' Views.

In all countries the most conservative part of the population are the women, and particularly in this case in the east. A man may change his religion, his politics, his race and social prejudices, and sever his allegiance to king and country, even in the Balkan states, where these matters assume an heroic importance. The Oriental woman, however, opposes with a conservatism that is sublimely tenacious, all change, all progress in these directions, and stranger still, all tendency toward her own emancipation.

If a movement were set on foot to do away with the yashmak (face veil) and the life of seclusion led by women in Turkey, the Turkish woman herself would oppose the innovation stronger than anybody. She regards her position in society from a very different standpoint to our ideas. To us she seems a prisoner, fettered and trammelled by the chains of a barbarous social system that persists in treating her as an animal who is the property of her husband.

If we could we would take her by the hand, remove her yashmak, take away the lattice work from the harem windows, and give her the same freedom as our own women enjoy. We would introduce her to the ball room, to the drawing room, permit her to mingle and converse with gentlemen and to become a social being. In doing all this we should, of course, be governed by the kindest motives, no more, no less, than that of securing for the Turkish woman social freedom and elevation, and, consequently, according to our ideas, increased happiness.

Nothing is more certain, however, than that the Turkish woman would raise her hands in virtuous horror at such a proposition. She doesn't consider herself a slave or a prisoner, by any means. She believes that she enjoys a far greater measure of freedom than the European or American lady. The barrier that separates her from the world at large, gives her a little world, all her own, to do as she pleases in. Whilst her more unfortunate sisters of the west are forever under the critical and censorious eyes of the opposite sex, she is able to snuff her fingers behind the veil of mystery that no man dare lift without her permission. Not even her own husband dare presume to violate her incognito in public, nor dare he invade her apartments, in his own house, without permission. All this the Turkish woman regards as real freedom, which she would in no wise change for the social freedom of the women of Frangistan. Our sympathy for interference in her behalf she neither asks nor desires.

But despite all this conservatism and aversion to change, the Turkish woman reserves to herself a woman's prerogative to be just a wee bit inconsistent with herself. Change she will not listen to for a moment—yet she has changed, and keeps on changing. But it is to do as she pleases in. A Shoemaker's Bright Idea.

"I will repair for nothing any boot or shoe that I sell," said the shoemaker.
"But where does the profit come in?" asked the scribe.
"Just as it comes to the saloon keeper who furnishes his patrons with a free lunch—in fact, I got the idea from a saloon keeper. People are always on the lookout for 'snaps.' If you can make them believe they are getting something for nothing, you are all right. I know a Bowery tailor who, by guaranteeing to keep all clothing made by him in repair for one year, has increased his sales over 1,000 per cent. There is also a wall paper dealer in Brooklyn who sells wall paper at a price which includes the hanging. For instance, if you buy one or more double rolls of paper from him he will send a man to your house to put the paper up. See the business done by that theatrical manager who gave away deeds to California building lots with every reserved seat ticket. The souvenir presented by our city managers is only another scheme for making people think that they are getting something for nothing. By agreeing to resole all shoes bought of me I merely divide my profits with my customers, I am only sustained by this division is more than made good by the increased volume of business done."

"Do you make any reduction in price if a customer waives all claim to the repairs?"
"Hardly. I have only one price—repairs or no repairs. Yes, that is a good shoe. Thank you—when the heels or soles become worn come in and see me and I'll fix them up for you free."—New York Mail and Express.

Chart of the Pleiades.

A remarkable photo-engraved chart of the Pleiades, showing 2,230 stars from the third to the seventeenth magnitude, has been produced at the Paris observatory.

Sir Isaac Newton's autograph, in the shape of a letter, brought $315 at a recent sale in England. It was bought for Trinity college, Cambridge.

A comparison of the work of English, French and American detectives shows the latter to be 12 per cent. ahead all around.

On the Fourth Floor.
A New York coroner's physician remarks that in his experience he has found that more people die in the fourth floor of a building than any of the others. In the cases of sudden deaths he says that there are more which take place on the fourth floor in one year in New York than in all other parts of the houses combined.—Chicago Herald.

The present year bids fair to be a disastrous one from tornadoes and wind storms. This is fore-shadowed by the number of storms we have already had—the most destructive one so far this year having occurred at Mt.
