

The Evening Herald.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

A. Salisbury, Printer, Rockwood Building, Telephone No. 35.

Dr. Siglas, Office in Gering's Drug Store, Residence Cor. Sixth and Granite, Telephone No. 42.

Dr. Withers, the Painless Dentist, Union Block, over Fricke's Drug Store, Plattsmouth.

—Today is pay day at the B. & M. shops.

—Miss May Beverage gave a large party at her home last Saturday night.

—Mr. W. H. Baker is moving his stock to the Anheuser-Busch building today.

—The county seat is seated, and a town not many miles away is Weeping Water.

—The east store-room in the Anheuser-Busch building is being fitted up for the post office.

—The three-year-old child, of Mr. Peter Goos, who died yesterday of membranous croup, was buried this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

—Great preparations are being made for the coming jollification meeting to be held here tonight. Large delegations are expected from all neighboring cities.

—Married at the residence of Wm S. Wise, by squire L. C. Stiles, Saturday evening, Nov. 10th, 1888, Mr. James Rebal to Miss Mary Trilley, all of Plattsmouth.

—Advance agent Nugent, for Murray and Murphy is in the city today making preparations for the coming of the Irish visitors and their company on Monday, Nov. 19th.

—The line of march which will be adopted tonight by the jubilant republicans in their march will be the same as on the 13th. Parties along the line are requested to illuminate.

—Sewer contractor Thompson was arrested by the sheriff this morning for taking some parts of the grading engine which was seized some time ago from him. He will have his trial on Monday next.

—"The Old Fashioned District School" will be given by the Y. L. R. R. A. and the ladies aid society of the Presbyterian church, Thursday and Friday, December 12th and 14th, at Waterman's opera house.

—Mr. R. Ginger who visited his home in Pennsylvania to cast his ballot and pay a short visit to his relatives, returned home yesterday morning to resume his duties here at the B. & M. ticket office.

—Membranous croup is the prevalent death visitor among the children of our city at present. The majority of deaths among them during the last two months have resulted from the effect of that dread plague.

—Jennie Ritchie, the five year old daughter of Mr. James Ritchie who died Saturday morning, was buried yesterday afternoon. A short burial service was held at the Episcopal church before the cortege moved toward the cemetery.

—It's about time C. W. Sherman should prepare himself for the difficulty now staring him in the face. It is said that he made an agreement some time ago to wheel the ugliest colored lady in the state for a whole block on Main street if Cleveland was defeated. He defeated all right.

—The business men who were afforded so much gratification by the victory of Plattsmouth over Weeping Water in holding the county seat, should decorate and illuminate their windows to-night during the grand jollification. Every man should show his appreciation in the coming event, and help out what is expected to be a hullabaloo.

—Bob Fitzgerald, a prominent Irish democrat, was seen last Saturday night carrying a man named Gavin around a whole block to fulfil a contract made on the result of the election. Bob was about to play out before he had completed his task, as the man he carried was about as heavy as himself, but being prepared for all emergencies, he spurred the frantic Irishman up to a sense of his duty.

—The ladies of St. Luke's church who made arrangements to give a Chrysanthemum social and hop next Thursday have changed the date, and we learn that the event will occur on the day previous, Wednesday, Nov. 14th at Fitzgerald's hall. The door will be opened in the afternoon and the ladies will gracefully accommodate all their visitors. Admission 10 cents, dance tickets for the evening $1, supper 50 cents per couple.

—About two hundred Plattsmouth republicans, wearing hats painted red, white and blue in a hundred various styles, went by special to Omaha Saturday night to attend a jollification there. Nearly every man was armed with a tin horn and the mighty blast made by the whole number before they started from here, made the hair of their audience stand on end. About as large a crowd from Glenwood accompanied them. It is estimated that there were about 75,000 people on the streets in Omaha, and it was said to be the greatest turnout ever seen there.

Marion and Ammi.

And it came to pass on the sixth day of the forty-fourth week in the eleventh month of the year that the gentiles of the largest city of a large state shouted for joy and marched around their city blowing trumpets.

And it came to pass on the evening of the same day that there came to the gathering large numbers from abroad, among them were followers from the city of hills, and there were two among them named Marion and Ammi, two mighty men in that land.

And Ammi said unto Marion, let us go forth into the city where our brothers goeth and let us rejoice with them.

And Marion answered saying, we will go up together for who knoweth what harm may come unto our brethren of the city of hills.

And Marion and Ammi went unto the large city of the large state and rejoiced with them. And when the hosts had shouted for joy until their throats became parched, and they had marched to the ends of the city blowing their horns and making a great noise, it was about the eleventh hour. And Ammi said unto Marion, let us go to our brothers and tell them to go once more unto our city.

And they went unto them and bade them go, for the hour was late and the morning of the seventh day would soon dawn.

And Marion said to Ammi, let us remain in this big city of our brothers on the seventh day and show our brothers how we can rejoice on the seventh day. And as they waited their hearts beat for joy within. On the morning of the seventh day the two men arose and went forth onto the streets, and as they walked along together they met a man named Smith who had once lived in the city of hills. He was a law maker among the gentiles, and all feared him with a great fear. And he said unto Marion and Ammi, let us go unto the city of many bluffs on this the Sabbath day. And the three men went on their way across the mighty bridge, and Ammi said unto the other two: My feet are sore and my heart faileth me for the distance is great.

And Marion and the other gentle said unto Ammi, whose feet were sore, come thou with us and we will bear thee straight forward to the city of bluffs.

They walked along together espousing Ammi.

A man came that way driving an ass, and the ass looked weary. And the two men spoke to the man and offered him ten pieces of silver to take them to the city.

The Smithite had on his head a covering which looked like a bushel. The boy which was on the wagon was high, and the three gentiles had to stretch their necks to look over.

The women who passed laughed at the men and when the three men reached the city of bluffs Ammi said unto Marion we will wash our feet and rub them with ointment for they are sore. We will never come this way again.

The Works of a Great Actress.

"Thou standest proudly and alone in art, expression, form and grace, and changing beauties of thy face. And sweetest of thy voice and tone. Like sceptered genius on a throne."

Rhea was born in Brussels, of wealthy parents, and early in life commenced hard study, now being highly educated. Nine years of her life were spent in a convent, at the close of which time her father and mother both died. Her father had lost his fortune. She has two sisters married, but is unmarried herself. Her taste led her to books and music, the piano being one of her favorite instruments, on which she performs very finely. Having a decided talent and showing a desire for acting, she was induced by friends among the nobility to appear on the stage. She recited to Charles Fletcher, who predicted success for her, and recommended her to Samson, the teacher of Rachel. He being too old to teach at that time, sent her to Beauvallet, a great tragedian and professor in the conservatory. Sept. 15, 1871, she made her debut in Brussels, in the comedy of "Fairy Fingers," remaining there for one year a great favorite. She then went to Rouen, from there to Paris, playing at the Vaudeville for one year. Afterwards when on a starring tour through France, she received letters from the Imperial court to come to the French Imperial Theatre, and afterwards, by request of the Czar, she appeared at the Russian Theatre, remaining there for five months. After the assassination of the Czar the theatre was closed, and she went to England. After studying English one month, she appeared in "Much Ado About Nothing."

—A large number of Plattsmouth people joined the host of excursionists going to Omaha Saturday night to witness the grand jollification here and several remained over night to hear Gilmore's band at the Grand opera house yesterday afternoon. All were apparently well repaid for the trouble by the gratification of their desire to hear music in its richest strains. The programme was interspersed with vocal selections from the very best artists in the country and that alone brought forth marked appreciation from all.
