A PROFESSIONAL LIAR ON THE STAFF OF THE "OMAHA BEE" GIVES MANNING A DOSE FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE "CAUSE"

The Omaha Bee has had a correspondent in Iowa for several weeks whose business is to defame the towns through which this villainous wretch passes.

It now begins to look as if the two Dakotas, Montana and Washington territories would yet be admitted by the present congress.

Rattlesnakes as Food. It was said of a strong political partisan that he would swallow rattlesnakes if party interests demanded it.

A Huge Glass Furnace. The tank glass furnace plant of the Chumace-McKee company in Plattsmouth is the first of its kind in the country.

A Family of Cranks. There resides in Urbana, O., a veritable family of cranks. Their name is Glenn, and two sisters and a brother are now living.

There are a number of possible applications of the process—the clearing of smoke from funnels, the dissipation of dust particles in mills, and the general abatement of the smoke nuisance that is so unpleasant in manufacturing towns.

The correspondent then goes on and tells about visiting a saloon on the corner of Front and Woolman streets. There are no such streets in town. He had evidently been imbibing too freely of Omaha razzle-dazzle and his mind wandering back to the happy times he experienced in the debauches in lower Douglas street, Omaha.

John Alberts, once the leading saloon keeper here and a man of considerable reputed wealth, still continues to run a "lusing ken," notwithstanding the discouraging fact that his whole stock, consisting of $,000 or $800 worth of whiskeys and wines, was seized by the authorities about a year ago and turned into the gutter.

The deprived creature undoubtedly means John Albert, but John never kept a saloon in Manning. At one time he owned a wholesale house and did a thriving business, but he never had any liquor seized by the officers.

The yield last year of precious metals in the United States and territories foot up $114,341,592 against $104,645,959.

Over one-half of the strikes last year were entered into by coal miners. They lost $3,273,529 days labor.

The correspondent then goes on and tells about visiting a saloon on the canary and mirror. A lady cites the following pretty incident of the pleasure her canary derived from seeing his reflection in a bit of looking glass.

Some time ago I purchased a canary at a bird store. The little creature was thus accustomed to companionship of its kind. At my home it was alone.

The pretty little songster was evidently homesick. It would not sing, it would not eat, but just drooped and pined. I talked to it, chirped to it, and tried my best to cheer birdie up in vain.

I was on the point of returning the canary to the bird store, when a friend said, "Give him a piece of looking glass." I did so. I put a piece of broken mirror as large as my two hands outside the bird's cage, and fastened it there.

He hopped down from his perch almost immediately, and going up close looked in, seeming delighted. He chirped and hopped about, singing and putting on all the pretty airs he was master of.

One of the most interesting remains of English literature in the Seventeenth century is the "Anatomy of Melancholy," written by Robert Burton, who was interred in Christ Church cathedral, Oxford, on the 27th of January, 1633.

In appearance M. du Maurier, the artist of London Punch, bears a striking resemblance to Alma Tadema.
