To be held on the 8th day of June, 1889, for the purpose of submitting to the legal voters of said county the question and proposition of voting and issuing the bonds of said county in the amount of Eighty Thousand Dollars for the building of a County Court House at the city of Plattsmouth, in said county of Cass, and for causing to be levied annually a tax on all the taxable property of said Cass county, sufficient for the payment of the interest on said bonds, and for causing the levying annually a tax on all the taxable property in said Cass county sufficient to pay five per centum of the principal of such bonds; and at the tax levy next preceding the maturity of such bonds levying a tax on all the taxable property of said county to an amount sufficient to pay the principal and interest due on said bonds, and that at such special election so called and held the said question and proposition be submitted to the legal voters of said county in the form hereafter set forth. Said question and proposition so to be submitted is in words and figures, following:

Shall the county of Cass in the state of Nebraska, issue and put upon the market Eighty bonds of said county, of the denominations of One thousand dollars each, said bonds to be dated January 1st, 1890 and to be paid at the fiscal agency of the state of Nebraska, in the city of New York, the state of New York, twenty years after date thereof redeemable at any time on or after ten years from the date thereof at the option of said county of Cass, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum payable annually on the first day of January in each year, for which interest coupons shall be attached payable at the fiscal agency, aforesaid.

And shall the Board of County Commissioners of the said county of Cass, or other person or persons, charged by law with the levying of taxes for said county for the time being in addition to the annual taxes, caused to be levied annually a tax on all the taxable property of said county sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds as the same shall become due and payable, and also cause to be levied each year upon the taxable property of said county a tax sufficient to pay five per cent of the principal of said bonds and that at the tax levy preceding the maturity of said bonds, levy a tax on all taxable property of said county to an amount sufficient to pay the principal and interest due on said bonds, and taking such action as the requirements of the law and the provisions of the statutes in such cases made and provided, and the interest of said county and the public may demand.

Provided, that proceedings shall be commenced for the erection of the said court house on or before the first day of April 1890, and shall be continued without unnecessary delay until the same shall be completed; and that at such special election so called and to be held, the said question and proposition above set forth shall be submitted to a vote of the legal voters of said county in the following form and manner, that is to say, the form of the ballot to be used at such election in favor of said question and proposition shall be as follows:

"For the issue of the bonds of the county of Cass for the purpose of building a county court house and the levy of a tax to pay the principal and the interest of such bonds."

And the form of ballots to be used at such election against said question and proposition shall be as follows:

"Against the issue of the bonds of the county of Cass for the purpose of building a county court house and the levy of a tax to pay the principal and interest of said bonds."

It is further ordered that the following notice of said special election shall be made out by the county clerk of said Cass county and clerk of this board, which shall be signed by the chairman of the board of county commissioners of said Cass county, in the state of Nebraska, and the county clerk of said Cass county and the clerk of this board, to-wit:

HER SLIPPERS.
Ah, those dainty little slippers,
Which encase her shapely feet,
Have cast lasting spells upon me
And my wild heart ceased to beat
In time to their dulcet music
As they patter down the street.
'Neath her snowy skirts' chaste folds
They alternately peep,
And her pure Castilian instep
In my longing sight I keep,
As she glides along the pavement
With such free and graceful sweep.
Ah, how happy are those slippers
To enclose in close embrace
Such exquisite little feet,
Gilded with such wondrous grace!
I envy the innocent earth
The track of their lightesome pace.
Every week I hear those footfalls
Gently up the hall steps patter,
Filling all my heart with gladness
As I list to their sweet clatter—
For she's bringing clean clothes to me,
My washerwoman's daughter!
—George Austin in New Orleans Picayune.

Landor's Story of Morocco.
Henry Savage Landor, the young English painter who is doing so much in his direction to sustain the great name made by his grandfather, Walter Savage Landor, in the direction of letters, tells us that in Morocco the natives run away and hide whenever they see an artist preparing to make sketches. He says that when he first visited that country he one day drew forth his pocket sketch box and innocently began sketching a section of a little bazaar street, whereupon, much to his astonishment, the merchants all hurriedly bundled their stocks into large cloth wrappers and scampered away. He subsequently learned that these Moors believe the painter or sculptor who reproduces their bodies invites their souls to occupy his counterfeit presentations. The Moors are said to have many stories of persons who have lost their souls by reason of portraits having been made of their bodies. If we could get the ear of the Moors a few moments we believe we could allay their fears by proving to them that it is only here and there a painter or sculptor puts any soul whatever into his work.—New York Star.

Untimely Rain.
"I saw," said a friend of mine, "you had something in about the grangers a week or two ago. I think it very funny. You know when that rainy spell came on I was up in the country staying on a ranch. We used to get the San Francisco papers, of course, every day, and every one of them was whooping up the rain. 'The farmers are now jubilant. This God sent rain means millions of dollars to the state, and the granger gazes over his fields happy in the prospect of a big harvest,' and all that sort of thing. It used to amuse me."
"Why?"
"Why? There wasn't a granger within fifty miles or a ranch hand or anybody else who wasn't cursing that blamed rain."
"The country needed it."
"Yes; but there was to be a big dance in the town, and every mother's son and daughter was going to it, and the rain came and knocked it endwise. They'd rather have had the crop ruined than miss that dance."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Public Readings Pay.
What emoluments do public readers receive? They are generally well paid. Mrs. Scott-Siddons, for instance, makes more money than any one else in the profession, and has returned to Europe with $20,000, her net receipts for a season's readings. She receives from $100 to $200 a night.

Locke Richardson gets even higher pay. For a course of six readings he would receive about $1,000. When he reads before one of the clubs he gets from $100 to $200. Sydney Wollett has the same repertoire; he, too, is a very busy man.
The demand nowadays is not so much for professional readers as for authors who read from their own works. Caba, for instance, is a great success. He never gives a reading for less than $100. He is in great demand for young ladies' schools and seminaries.
Thomas Nelson Page is also a great platform success; he never goes for less than $100.—Philadelphia Times.

The "Spring Fever."
I have had many people ask me for a remedy for the ills which usually visit the human body in the spring, causing the well known complaint of "spring fever." My experience has been that the best cure for this malady is plenty of healthful and invigorating outdoor exercise. The most pleasant of these is horseback riding. When one is on a trotting horse, which I prefer, every muscle is brought into play and exercised. There are other outdoor amusements which are equally beneficial. There is one prevalent form of pastime which I consider injurious, and that is bicycling. When one is astride a wheel he is bent forward, and, I am convinced, is placed in a position which has a tendency to contract the chest. This is, of course, exactly the opposite effect to be desired or expected from outdoor amusements.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Artists' Canvas.
Canvas, regarded from an artist's point of view, is the principal material upon which oil paintings are made. Two kinds are prepared for this purpose, of which the best is called tacking. Before it is put into the artist's hands it is usually primed or ground of a neutral gray or other tint. Certain sizes of canvas being in greater request than others are kept ready stretched on frames. Those used for portraits are known by the names of kit cat, which measures 28 or 29 inches by 38; three-quarters, 25x20 inches; half length, 40x30 inches; Bishop's half length, 44 or 45x36 inches; Bishop's whole length, 52x44 inches.—New York Telegram.

Miss Maud Howe recently met Eugene Field and expressed her feeling in this outburst, which he takes pleasure in recounting: "Mr. Field is the most charming literary man I met in the west, but he looks like a convict!"

Thousands of Cats.
"When I was living in a steamboat town on the Mississippi," remarked an old man in a barber's shop a few days ago, "there was a fellow who put up a very neat job on the inhabitants, against whom he must have had a terrible grudge. He came into the town one day and distributed hand bills right and left, taking special pains to put as many as possible into the hands of farmers who come to sell their grain. That was before the railroads came to take business away from the river towns, some of which had an immense trade.
"The place I was in had 5,000 or 6,000 inhabitants, and was the shipping port for all the grain raised for miles around, as well as the place where the farmers obtained all their supplies. The last time I was there it had dwindled down to a village of 2,000, and perhaps by this time it has no existence at all, even on the map. These bills that were so freely scattered about stated that the advertiser had a contract with a certain steamboat company for furnishing a large number of cats to destroy the rats and mice that were very numerous about the warehouses at different landings along the river. He therefore offered $3 for each full grown tom cat, $2 for each healthy female puss, and 50 cents a head for kittens old enough to get their own living. All the cats were to be delivered at a certain place in the town on a Thursday evening—the night that a particular

"Well, that Thursday afternoon came and all the streets of the town were just crowded with people. They came in wagons, on foot, and on horseback, and every person carried a sack, some of them several. By evening between 3,000 and 4,000 cats had been brought into that defenseless city. They were left in and about a vacant building near the landing. The man who was to purchase the cats was nowhere in sight. The country people were making inquiries for him everywhere. A crowd of boys, attracted by the caterwauling, went into the building and began amusing themselves by untying the bags and letting out the cats. Of course the cats began fighting and raised a noise like 10,000 demons.

"Suddenly a stampede occurred and the animals rushed pell mell into the crowd, crawling over people, jumping and fighting, and climbing walls and roofs in a mad race for liberty. The boys took after the cats, and the men joined in, determined to rid the town of the feline invaders. The next morning there was a good many stray cats seen about in back yards, and a good many dead ones lying in the streets and alleys. One boatman said he counted 400 dead cats in the river. The man who perpetrated the joke was never again seen in the place, luckily for him."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Wonderful Tribe.
A remarkable story is told in a recent issue of The Paris Societe de Geographic records. M. Camille Donis recounts the experience he underwent in a journey in northwestern Africa. Disguised as a native, it appears, he landed on the west coast near Cape Garnet, several hundred miles south of Morocco, pretending to be the people of that region that he had been shipwrecked. At first he was roughly dealt with; but finally he gained the confidence of his captors, and, after five months' wanderings, by dint of craft he made his way to Morocco. Here his disguise was discovered, and he was thrown into prison—to be released presently at the instigation of the British minister.

The adventures recorded are of interest, as they give a new version to the popular story of the great desert. The Oulad Delim, into whose hands M. Donis fell, he says, are unusually intelligent. They speak a pure Arabic, founded upon the constant study of the Koran. They are monogamous, and treat their wives with the greatest affection and respect as equals of the men. The girls share the education of the boys, learning to read and write with them; hence, the women show an intellectual and moral elevation far beyond that of any other Moslem women.—The St. James Gazette.

A Lover's Dream.
A girl at Hackney, aged 19, with her two brothers and a younger sister, were left in charge of the house while their parents attended a funeral in the country. In the evening the girl's sweetheart called. As she was alarmed at noises which she fancied she heard, he stayed at the house all night to reassure her. During the night he dreamed that he saw the girl walk past him, beckoning him to follow. He awoke, and, becoming alarmed, went into the passage. Having dressed, he went to the door of deceased's room and knocked. Receiving no answer he then awoke the others. On the bedroom door being opened deceased was found lying on the floor, with blood issuing from her mouth. From a doctor's examination it would seem that the girl died at about the time that her sweetheart dreamed she beckoned him.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Rapidity of Pulsation.
In a new born child the pulse beats 150 in a minute; at one year old, 110; at two, 95; from seven to fourteen, 85; in the adult man, 72, and in the woman, 80. The frequency of the pulse beat is increased by drinking hot water or tea, diminished by drinking these cold. Adding a warm covering to the clothing of the body increases the pulse by about ten beats a minute. Mental activity diminishes it more or less.—New York Telegram.

Following His Instructions.
"What are you doing, Patrick?"
"Wakin' up your husband, ma'am."
"But why?"
"Because it's tin o'clock, ma'am, when I was to give him the dhrops to make him shlape."—The Epoch.
