GOLD BUG OUT BY HAND.

DISCOVERY OF BREYFOGLE'S MINE BY A PROSPECTOR.

Many Lives Have Been Lost in the Search for the Historic Treasure—Gold is found There on the Surface in Lumps Like Plums in a Pudding.

There is not a miner or old settler in the southern part of California who is not familiar with the story of the famous Breyfogle mine. It ranks with the Gunsight, the Pegler and the Lost Cabin legends.

Briefly, for the information of those who have never heard the tale, the story goes that away back in the early fifties a party, in which was a man named Breyfogle, set out for California by way of the southern Utah road...

Breyfogle was something of a miser in his way, and while prospecting in a wild and forbidding region he found a place where he could literally dig great nuggets of gold out of the decomposed quartz or cement, as he called it, with his knife.

They pushed on toward their destination, but between the Indians and thirst only a few of them ever reached civilization. Breyfogle told his story, exhibited the nuggets he had dug out and carefully preserved, and then spent the rest of his life in a fruitless search for the deposit.

A LUCKY STRIKE. George Montgomery, an experienced miner well known in the Wood river region of Idaho, was on a prospecting trip in the region to the southeastward of Death valley.

While prospecting in the mountains last named and at the upper end of the valley Montgomery made a discovery which bears every indication of being the long sought Breyfogle mine, or at least one exactly similar.

One ledge located by Montgomery is eight feet wide, and has been traced by its outcroppings for a distance of 9,000 feet. In the decomposed surface rock the gold is found almost like plums in a pudding.

After making several locations Montgomery spread the news of his discovery, the result being that some thirty or forty miners are at work in the valley.

Fortunes for many. To the question whether he was looking for capital or a purchaser, Mr. Montgomery returns an emphatic negative.

There is plenty of mesquite wood for fuel in the valley within three or four miles of the newly discovered camp, while in the mountains, fifteen miles away, are forests which afford abundance of timbering material.

Besides the deposits of gold, some rich silver veins have been found, assays from which run over a hundred ounces to the ton. Lead and copper also abound, but at present gold is the sole object of search.

In any event the Breyfogle mystery seems to have been solved, and perhaps this fact will give another stimulus to the search for the Gunsight and the Pegler mines.—San Francisco Letter.

Prince Napoleon's Pompeian Mansion.

When the part Prince Napoleon might have taken in French politics ceases to be contrasted with this part he actually did take he will be remembered for quite a different achievement. In a strange part of Paris he built a very curious mansion and collected a brilliant circle of friends to witness a singular entertainment.

Artists, authors, dilettanti—they all took it; but the prince alone had fun and purpose to realize his wild project. If he could build a house just like one of those old Pompeian mansions, if he could furnish it classically, put in the right bronzes and stannettes, himself dress like an old Roman and get his friends to do the same—well, he actually reached the dream to a fact.

In the avenue Montaigne, at that time perched near the Bal Mabille, the palace was reared on the true Pompeian lines. Gerome painted the decorations—Homer chanting his ballads, and nymphs that represented the Odyssey and Iliad.

Prince Napoleon set up busts and statues of his family all round the atrium—Napoleon and Josephine and Marie Louise, Lucien, Charles, Louis and Jerome; they all had their place in this classic apartment.

Making Money Talk.

"Look at that fellow," said the man in the window. "Who?" I inquired. "That young fellow standing outside the rail."

"Well, what of it?" "Don't you notice that five dollar bill he is holding in his hand?"

"Yes, Well?" "He's been flourishing it around for five minutes. Bought two fifty cent seats in the gallery just now. Gave me a ten dollar bill. I gave him four silver dollars and that five. Been all this time putting the four into his pocket."

"Well, he had to unbutton his overcoat. That takes time." "Yes, but it doesn't take five minutes. Besides, he's had to put the five dollars into his vest pocket in no time. But he didn't. He holds it out in plain view."

"Suppose he does. Hasn't he a right to?" "Of course. But don't you get on to the racket?"

"No. What is it?" "Girl." "Girl?"

"Yes. That's the girl standing over there in the corner. She's watching him. He's just drawn his week's pay, ten dollars, and is talking her to see the show. When they came in he flashed the ten dollars, and dazzled her with it a while before he got into line. Now he's letting her get a good look at the five dollars before he sinks it. It's a great scheme. No other fellow can steal that girl now. He's got her solid. And the long green did it."—Chicago Post.

Cobbler Sprague's Frugal Wife.

Ten thousand dollars in gold and greenbacks has been found secreted in an old table in the residence of John Sprague, a shoemaker, of Wilmington, Del. The money represents his deceased wife's savings for thirty-nine years.

When Mrs. Sprague died search was made for the bankbook supposed to exist, but to no avail. The house was ransacked also, but no money was found. Finally Mrs. McGinley, a neighbor, suggested, as she had had a dream to that effect, that possibly the treasure might be secreted in an antique table, and this article of furniture was examined.

The Tableau.

The palmiest day of the tableau entertainment has rather gone by. Sacred and profane history, ancient and modern customs have been faithfully worked for varieties in tableau representation and their freshness has pretty well departed.

Pleasant, but Unsafe. "Wouldn't it be nice if some of the pleasant things said about persons after they are dead could only be said while they were still alive? It would cheer their dying hours."

"Yes, it would be nice, but it would hardly be safe." "Why not?" "They might recover."—New York Recorder.
