

The Omaha papers announce that Judge S. M. Chapman has been granted a pension.

The Rebecca Lodge will give a basket social at their hall Wednesday evening March 9.

The new high school library was opened today. It will hereafter be opened every Friday.

Conductor Barrow resumed his run on No. 3 last night and Conductor Rancy is back on the Schuyler run.

Mrs. Fred Burk left this morning for Council Bluffs where she will hereafter reside. Mr. Burk has secured a place with one of the leading implement dealers, as head sales man.

Miss Rose Harper, a cousin of B. A. McElwain, the jeweler, passed through the city this morning on No. 5 enroute from Chicago to her home in Sun Dance, Wyoming.

The ladies of the Aid society of the M. E. church gave a social at the residence of Edwin Davis last evening. A large crowd was present and a good time was had. Refreshments were served, which netted a neat sum to the exchequer of the society.

Engineer Geo. Ballance and Fireman, Lester Vivian, left this morning with engine No. 275 for New Castle, Wyoming. The engine is one of the large ones bought by the B. & M. and can be used at a better advantage on the New Castle division than on this end. That division now has all of the large engines.

The little child of Deputy County Clerk Swearingen met with an accident yesterday afternoon which would have resulted fatally but for the prompt action of Mrs. Swearingen. The child had gone outside of the yard, where some leaves were burning, and the bottom of its dress caught fire. The fire was put out in time to prevent the child from being seriously burned, although its back was slightly scorched.

Plattsmouth will now be represented in the Keely institute at Blair this morning Billy Mostin and Selwin Kincaid boarded No. 5 with tickets in their pockets for Blair, furnished them by the representative of the institute.

The Musical Association

Was adjourned at its last meeting to meet at the M. E. church Friday evening of this week. It is desired to call the meeting to order promptly at seven thirty and all members are requested to be on hand. Mrs. Clappe, the conductor will be present and the books are ordered. It is the desire to get through by nine o'clock to give members an opportunity to attend the P. E. O. social.

Died This Morning.

Mrs. Shadrac Cole, died this morning at her home two miles west of Plattsmouth at 2 o'clock. A short time ago her little step daughter was helping her carry home a sack of flour, the little girl fell and dropped the sack, Mrs. Cole kept hold of the end and the sack when it fell jerked it so that she was hurt internally. The deceased was about fifty years old. The funeral will occur to-morrow and the remains will be interred in the Horning cemetery.

Noss Jollities.

The opera house was comfortably filled last night to witness the famous Noss Jollities in their musical specialties and bright comedy, "A Quick Match." The entertainment was very pleasing and several of the specialties were very well gotten up, especially the "Six of the 400." The comedy was light and well played as a general rule. The voice of the ladies was hardly strong enough to give the vocal selections the displays they deserved but their make up was immense.

The Oxford Club.

BEATEN BACK BY POLICE.

Seven Thousand Hungry Workmen Surround the Palace of the Emperor.

The riotous demonstration of the unemployed laborers in Berlin yesterday has been officially investigated and also weighed up, with the result that while the official report attempts to belittle the affair, the more that the independent newspapers publish, the more they deny the outbreak was a serious exhibition of the masses of the people to find themselves in a predicament originated as a result of about 5000 of 4000 workmen at the brewery during the last week. The men had gathered in the square in front of a restaurant where they had sent to the emperor's quarters, to demand that the emperor should employ workmen at the same wages as the unemployed workmen at the brewery. The message was communicated to Herr Frobenbeck, the way, is an extreme liberal, almost a socialist, in fact, the son of a brewmaster, and the fact that the situation was so dangerous one, caused the emperor to delegate, through his message to the effect that he would employ the workmen at the same wages as the workmen at the brewery, to their homes, as the emperor was to be named as the cause of such as the one that the workmen were contemplating, and the emperor forbade all further demonstrations and processions, and that the emperor be taken to prevent any further demonstration on the part of the delegates represented.

With this information as the result of their visit to the brewmaster, the delegates returned to their comrades, who by that time numbered fully 5000 men, the disappointing result of their mission. The message of the burgomaster was received by the workmen with regular howls of rage and screams of bitter execration, mingled with yells of "Let's go to the ministry of commerce," "Let's march in a body to the reichstag and demand redress," and finally with a shout of "Let's appeal in person to the emperor." This last suggestion caused such a howl from the assemblage that it must have been heard for miles around.

"To the castle," was the cry, "Let's tear down the gates, if necessary and see the emperor." Thereupon steps were immediately taken to gather the great body of workmen into some sort of order, the socialist portion of those present showing themselves to be all ready to convert the unweildy body of shouting, yelling men into parade shape. Amidst the uproar a number of the cooler heads and more thoughtful of the leaders of the workmen tried almost in vain to be heard. In loud piercing tones they shouted to the men not to loose their heads and remember that they were but a small handful of men measured against the garrison and police of Berlin.

But the whole morning, previous to the departure of the delegates to call on the burgomaster and while waiting for them to return, some of the best men at least had been drinking freely and were then half mad with beer and anger at the manner in which their delegation had been received by Herr Frobenbeck, and the remarks of Herr Hessler, as well as those of other prudent leaders of the people, were drowned in deafening cries of "Let's go to the castle," "To the castle," "The emperor must receive us," "Mention of the emperor's name was received with howls of derision on all sides, accompanied by a perfect hurricane of grossly insulting remarks, addressed to his majesty, who must have trembled for the security of his throne had he been present. The real sentiments of the German masses seemed for the first time to have been expressed in the curses and fearful insults hurled by the 5000 tongues of the young grandson of the great Emperor William. All the recent utterances and doings of the present emperor of Germany seem to have struck deep and dangerous roots in the hearts of the people, for upon this occasion, as if resolved to give vent to their long pent-up feelings of indignation and wrath, the workmen, the socialists and their sympathizers, recalled and jeered at everything recently credited to their monarch.

It is now estimated that fully 6000 persons marched through the Unter Den Linder and almost to the castle gates, the "Marseillaise" roaring its echoes into the sacred apartments of the emperor. At that stage of the riot many people believed that a revolution had broken out in Berlin, and the wildest rumors concerning the movement spread on all sides. The officers in command of the different corps of the garrison were communicated with by mounted orderlies and by wire, and such was the excitement and preparation for some time that one would have fancied that the people of Berlin were rising against the emperor and his government. From every available quarter detachments of police were hurriedly sent for, arriving at the palace on the trot and completely armed.

By this time the rioters had reached a point outside of the castle gates and there they halted sang the "Marseillaise" in thundering tones and wildly shouted for the emperor to appear. As soon as the force of police on the spot had been sufficiently reinforced a charge upon the rioters was ordered and then began the most desperate hand to hand fight ever witnessed in the streets of Berlin. The police it was evident had received strict orders to avoid bloodshed, but they hit right and left with the flat of their swords, pounded away with the stocks of their rifles and hammered the rioters with their batons. During the melee the police made about 100 arrests, but each arrest seemed to be the signal for an attempt at rescue upon the part of the mob and in some cases they tore their comrades from the grasp of the police and carried them away in triumph.

Acapenter with a hammer brought down more than one of the police, but at length fell himself severely wounded by a revolver bullet. One of the sturdiest of the mob was a Brandenburg blacksmith, who, with no weapon but his fists, resisted half a dozen policemen in their efforts to make him a prisoner. A terrible blow from his right arm nearly killed one of his assailants and provoked them into shooting him down. He was borne to the hospital, severely, if not fatally wounded.

CALLED TO MEET AT OMAHA.

The Third Party Nominating Convention to Assemble at the Nebraska Metropolis.

The joint committee in whose hands the matter was placed by the industrial conference in session at St. Louis, after an all day session selected Omaha, Neb., as the place for holding the nominating convention of the newly born third party, July 4. A formal call was issued. It repeats the platform adopted yesterday and urges all citizens who support the demands to meet the last Saturday in March, in their respective towns and villages, hold public meetings to ratify the demands, and take steps to organize preparatory to electing delegate to the national convention. It calls upon all duly qualified voters of the United States in favor of these principles, to send delegates to the national convention. The basis of representation is four delegates from each congressional district and eight delegates from each state at large, making the total number 1,775.

The address, in conclusion, says: "We call upon all citizens of the United States to help us make our principals triumphant. We believe that if the voters neglect their duties this year it may be impossible in any future canvass to protect the rights of the people, the homes of the land and the welfare of all future generations. We call upon all honest men to come to our support in this great contest."

A Surprised Zetetic. Another of those pleasant gatherings that make the hearts of those who participate in them, feel that it was good to be there, was held last Thursday noon at the residence of Mrs. Ingersoll, who, with the assistance of her Zetetic sisters had caused to be spread an elegant lunch, in honor of one of their brightest and most worthy members, Mrs. H. D. Travis, who was about to leave their social circle and take up her abode in the city of Plattsmouth.

This good lady was lured from her home by one of the tribe, and transported among her friends surrounded by good things prepared in her honor and as a token of their love and esteem for her. After disposing of the good things in sight Mrs. S. C. Treat, president of the Zetetic, presented on behalf of her associates and herself, a beautiful souvenir spoon of solid silver, inside the bowl of the same the word "Zetetic" was engraved, while the handle was decorated with lillies of the valley and the letter T and 1892. This took the lady completely by surprise, but she attested her appreciation of the gift in a touching and pleasing manner.

The afternoon was spent in social chat and plans for the future welfare of the society they all so much enjoy before they bid a final adieu to one of their members whose association they will always remember with pleasure.—Weeping Water Eagle.

An Unromantic Conclusion.

"When I was a young man," said the irrepressible Bodkins, "I was employed in a large house in the city, and as usual with persons of my age, I fell in love with a young lady and in due course of time was engaged. About two months before our marriage was to take place I was suddenly sent to Australia on very important business occasioned by the death of one of the firm in that country. I took a hasty and affectionate leave of my intended, with the promise to write to each other often. I was detained somewhat longer than I expected, but just before I sailed for home I bought a handsome and valuable ring, intending it as a 'coming-home' present for my sweetheart.

"As I was nearing the shore and reading the paper which the pilot had brought on board, curiously enough my eye fell on the 'marriages,' and there I saw an announcement of her marriage with another, a fellow I knew very well, too, which so enraged me that in my passion I threw the ring overboard.

"A few days afterward I was dining at this very hotel; fish was served up, and in eating it I bit on something hard, and what do you suppose it was?"

"The diamond ring?" exclaimed several.

"No," said the merry Bodkins, preserving the same gravity, "it was a fishbone."—Waverly Magazine.

Washington's Mother. In a little old house in Charles street, Fredericksburg, Va., Washington's mother, who was in her day a famous cook and housewife, was at times fond of giving a "small dance and dinner party."

There, "on the waxed floor of the front room, lighted by numerous candles," the belles and beaux of other days "did dance right merrily." In a diary now worn and yellow by age one bright-eyed belle tells: "My petticoat was of flowered peach satin, with long-waisted coat of white. A lace kerchief was gathered round my shoulders and my arms were bare to the elbow. A string of milk-white pearls did the around my throat. My hair I had high and pleasing powdered. And silver buckles were upon my shoes."

Old Mr. L., one of the neighbors, happening to drop in one morning while Mrs. Washington was busy in her dairy, was requested to come there if he cared to speak with her. He entered, found Mrs. Washington with skirts turned up and sleeves rolled, busy with the fresh-made butter which she was molding in a wooden tray. "For you know, Mr. L.," she said, briskly, "my tongue and my hands may be employed at the same time without loss."—Exchange.
