OFFICIALLY NOTIFIED.

President Harrison Notified of His Renomination.

THE ADDRESS AND THE REPLY.

Governor McKinley's Address Brief and to the Point--The Reply by the Executive One that Appealed to the American Hearts.

The committee proceeded to the executive mansion at about 1 o'clock. Some 200 guests were assembled in the east room. Without any preliminaries, Governor McKinley made his speech notifying the president of his nomination. It was in substance as follows:

Governor McKinley's Speech.
"President Harrison: This committee, representing every state and territory of the union, are here to perform a trust committed to them by the national republican convention, which convened at Minneapolis June 7, of bringing to you the official notification of your renomination as the republican candidate for president of the United States. Your nomination was but the registering by the convention of the will of the majority of the republicans of the United States and has been received in every quarter with satisfaction.

"Your administration has more than justified your nomination four years ago and the confidence of the people implied by your election. After one of the most careful, successful and brilliant administrations in our history you received a renomination furnishing an approval of your work which must bring to you the keenest gratification. Difficult and embarrassing questions which confronted your administration have been met with an ability, with fidelity to duty and with lofty patriotism which fill American hearts with glowing pride.

"We beg to hand you the platform of principles unanimously adopted by the convention which placed you in nomination. It was an American document. Protection, which shall serve the highest interests of American labor and American development. Reciprocity, which, while seeking the world's markets, shall not destroy American wages or surrender American markets. Honest money, which shall rightly measure labor and exchanges of the people and cheat nobody. Honest elections, which are true to the situation of public authority, are the principles which constitute for the most part the platform—principles of which you have already by word and deed given your earnest appeal and of which you stand to-day an exponent and representative.

"In conclusion we desire to extend to you our hearty congratulations and express our gratification at the honor paid you by a renomination."

The President's Reply.

The president in accepting the nomination said: "Gentlemen of the committee: When four years ago, in the anniversary declaration of national independence, a committee designated by republican national convention, held in Chicago, came to my home in Indianapolis to notify me of my nomination for the presidency, my sense of gratitude was forced into the far background by an overwhelming sense of responsibility of a leadership in a civil contest that involved so much to my country and my fellow citizens. No one so much as I realized that the strength of the campaign must be found in republican principals, and my hope was that nothing in life or word of mine might weaken the appeal of our American policies to American hearts.

"That appeal did not fail. A republican president and vice-president and a republican congress were chosen. The record has been made and we are now to submit it to the judgment of the patriotic people. Of my own relation to the great transactions in the legislation and in the administration which must be the basis of this judgment, it does not become me to speak. I gratefully accept, sir, the assurance given by the republican state conventions and by the national convention, through you, that no charge of inadequacy or delinquency to principle has been lodged against the administration. Faithful and highly successful work has been done by the heads of the executive departments and representatives abroad. I desire most cordially to acknowledge and commend the work of the Fifty-first congress, in which you, sir, bore such a conspicuous and useful part, will strongly and most beneficially influence national prosperity for generations to come. The general results of three years of republican control have been gratifying. Home market for farm products has been obtained and enlarged in the establishment of great manufacturing industries, while new markets abroad of large and increased value which had been obstinately closed to us, have been opened on favorable terms to our meats and breadstuffs by the removal of unjust discriminations and by numerous reciprocal trade agreements under section 3 of the McKinley bill. These acts of administration and legislation can not fortunately be judged by their fruits. In 1890 it was a conflict of predictions, now our adversaries must face the trade statistics and the prices current.

"But it is not appropriate that I should at this time discuss these public questions. I hope before long to be able by letter to convey to you a more formal acceptance of the nomination which the republican national convention has tendered me and to give briefly my reasons for adhering to the declaration of principles adopted by the convention and which you have so admirably summarized.

Will you accept, sir, for yourself and your associates upon the committee and for the whole body of the great convention, whose delegates you are, my profound thanks for this great honor, and will you, sir, allow me to express my most sincere expression of the gracious and cordial terms in which you have conveyed this message?"

A Conduit Electric Railway.

A conduit railway system has been devised in which the current is transmitted to the car by induction. It requires no overhead wires, storage batteries or surface or underground conduits, the arrangement of the transformers being such that the primary circuit is underneath the roadbed, while the secondary is carried on the car, so that there is no metallic connection between the car and the main circuit from which the current is derived.—New York World.

Twenty years ago a party of Mormons made numerous proselytes in the upper Androscoggin valley, and last week an emissary of the Church of Latter Day Saints baptized four converts at Dixfield Centre in the same region.

Utah's First Pavements.

After a long fight in the Ogden city council over the relative merits of sandstone, brick and asphaltum for street paving purposes, it has been decided to use native sandstone from the quarries a few miles distant from Ogden, and that only home labor shall be employed by contract. The district to be paved includes a number of blocks in the business part of town, for which paving bonds are now being negotiated. It will be the first paving done by this city or in this territory.—Utah Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Priceless Diamond Found.

A remarkable diamond has been recently found on the Koffeyfontein Diamond Mining company's ground in Australia, which appears to be of such value that even competent judges hesitate to name a price commensurate with its worth. It is said to be of a beautiful shade of pink, entirely devoid of spot or blemish, and to weigh 13½ carats.

Natural Gas in Utah.

A flow of natural gas has been struck at Salt Lake City at a depth of 600 feet, the pressure being 160 pounds to the square inch. Several companies are engaged in sinking wells in that locality, with favorable indications of finding the gas in considerable quantities.—New York Journal.

Pig Iron in March.

In the first week in March the iron furnaces in this country are said to have produced more pigs—193,990 tons—than in any previous week in history. One curious circumstance is that there were fewer furnaces in blast than in the preceding month.—New York Times.

The largest shipment of apples ever made from the United States left Portland recently in the steamship Labrador, which carried more than 13,000 barrels of fine fruit to England.

A fine collection of Seventeenth century tobacco pipes has just been found under an old London cellar and deposited in the Guildhall museum.

FAIRYLAND.

Under the branches they went together,
The blossoming branches that break the sky,
All in the morn of the young, sweet weather,
When softly the green on the hills doth lie,
And Dorothy thought it was over the meadow,
And Cicely said it was close by the spring,
But Polly was sure that the woodland's shadow
Sheltered that magical fairy ring.

So over the meadow they swiftly hid them—
Oh, but the bird in the blue sang sweet!
They saw not the blush of the brier beside them,

The violets smiling beneath their feet,
Long by the spring they lingered and listened,
'Twas a diadem set in a mossy rim,
And oh, the beauty that clustered and glistened

In frail ferns falling about its brim!
They sought in the wood for a wonder revealing,
Oh, but the leaves in a net o'erhead,
Oh, but the song through the pinetops stealing.

And oh, that hush down the dim ways shed!
Then, when the sun leaned lower to find them,
Homeward they wandered a sorrowful way,
And knew not the land they were leaving behind them.

The rare new land of a young June day!
But Dorothy thinks it is over the meadow,
And Cicely says it is close by the spring;
While Polly is sure that the woodland's shadow

Shelters the magical fairy ring!
—Virginia Woodward Cloud in St. Nicholas.

Theatrical Superstition.

Among country companies superstitions are more varied and extended than among metropolitan ones, and are of course more blindly and religiously adhered to. If, on entering a town where the next "stand" is to be made, a grave yard is visible on the right side of the railway track, the country manager's heart swells with bright anticipations. But if, on the contrary, the tombstones loom up on the left of the road, he becomes depressed, as he takes the fact as a warning that his "business" will be small during his engagement in that place. Such a manager will be apt to give some man or boy a free pass to the theater on a first night, as he would fear a run of ill luck in case a woman should chance to enter the house before a member of the opposite sex had found his way within.—Chicago Post.

How Mines Are Salted.

The gullibility of persons who buy mines has passed into a proverb. It is said that such properties have actually been salted with half melted silver dollars and sold to investors, who did not realize that the precious metal was not found in nature with the stamp of the mint upon it. Undoubtedly the most scientific method of accomplishing this sort of swindle is to apply the silver in the shape of a nitrate solution. When it is ready for use some salt is put into it and it is squirted over the rock, the salt causing an immediate precipitation of the metal in a manner that is equally conspicuous and deceptive to the eye.—Kansas City Times.

The Indian Hunter's Stone.

The Indian hunter will cut the shape of an animal out of stone, have it "blessed" by the medicine man and believe it gives him good fortune in the chase of the beast represented. When he kills one he dips the fetich in the blood. Perhaps he wraps about it beads, signifying money, and attaches to it little arrowheads, which represent the executive function of slaughter. So as to secure as much help from the unknown as possible, he hangs charms all over his person.—Washington Star.

Meerschmum Artists.

The artist who carves meerschmum is required to pass through as severe a school of apprenticeship lasting from three to ten years as though his work were in marble. Meerschmum carved and in the rough resembles the ordinary plaster cast. The outlines being complete, it is scraped with a knife, filed, soaked in a preparation, and then polished with a linen cloth.—New York Times.

Cannot Be Both.

A good body is necessary to a satisfactory expression of the mentality. But no man can be a Daniel Webster mentally and a John L. Sullivan physically. The possibilities of either the mind or body can be fully developed only at the expense of the other. The college boy who becomes a great athlete will not be a great scholar. Genius is almost always associated with soft spots.—Troy Press.

A Paying Business.

Money Lender—You want to borrow a hundred pounds? Well, here's the money. I charge 5 per cent. a month, and as you want it for a year, that leaves just forty pounds coming to you.

Innocent Borrower—Then if I wanted it for two years, there'd be something coming to you, I suppose, eh?—London Tit-Bits.

At Both Ends.

"By Jove," said the youngster, "I'd like to have $100,000 to go into business with in the proper shape."

"Ugh," growled the veteran, "I'd like to have $100,000 to go out of business with in the proper shape."—Detroit Free Press.

The oldest pensioner on the rolls of the New York pension office and two of the oldest in the United States, although pensioners are proverbially long lived, are General Tupper and General Dalley. They are veterans of 1812.

The city of Paris has 87,655 trees in its streets, and each tree represents a cost to the city of $75 francs. This makes in round numbers $3,000,000 worth of trees in the streets.
