According to the census of 1890, Chicago takes rank, by virtue of her population of 1,098,576 people, as the eighth largest city on the globe. Most of us desire, at one time or another, to visit a city in which so many persons find homes, and, when we do, we can find no better line than the "Burlington Route." Three fast and comfortable trains daily. For further information address the agent of the company at this place, or write to J. Francis, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Omaha, Nebraska.

Mr. Van Pelt, editor of the Craig, Mo., Meteor, went to a drug store at Hillsdale, Iowa, and asked the physician in attendance to give him a dose of something for cholera morbus and looseness of the bowels. He says: "I felt so much better the next morning that I concluded to call on the physician and get him to fix me up a supply of the medicine. I was surprised when he handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He said he prescribed it regularly in his practice and found it the best he could get or prepare. I can testify to its efficiency in my case at all events." For sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

JOSEPH COOK'S LATEST TEMPERANCE ADDRESS.

[The following is from an address by Joseph Cook at the recent anniversary of the National Temperance society in New York. It deserves a wide reading:]

"It is a fact and no fancy, that we have all lived to see the abolition of slavery. Why is it incredible that some of us may live to see a greater evil, namely, the liquor traffic, made an outlaw by both state and national constitutional enactments? There is more money behind the liquor traffic than was ever behind slavery. Those who used to be called by Charles Sumner 'the lords of the lash' never worked, or whipped, or burned, or starved to death in any circuit of the seasons before the civil war as many victims as the liquor traffic now destroys every year in our republic. Slavery never added as much to the wastes and burdens of the nation in any one circuit of the seasons before our military conflict began as the liquor traffic now does every year. Slavery never cost us a thousand millions annually. Slavery never destroyed 80,000 lives a year. Slavery did not produce nine-tenths of the crime of the land. It is on account of the unity of the liquor traffic and its growing audacity that I predict its overthrow. Slavery went down not chiefly because it was consummate wickedness. In the history of our conflict with slavery we saw the truth of the old Pagan proverb: 'Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad.' Public sentiment rose slowly against slavery, but when it fired on Fort Sumter and took the nation by the throat, then opposition to it acquired national predominance. When the liquor traffic takes the nation by the throat, you will find that although Americans often wait until the fifty-ninth minute of the eleventh hour before they arouse themselves in a great crisis, they may, nevertheless, unlock from their throat the grip of the great evil in the sixtieth minute.

"New York already has this grip on her throat. But New York is only one great city of a nation that is to be filled with crowded municipalities. The day is probably not fifty years distant when the lighted torch in the hand of that statue of the goddess of liberty at the gates of the ocean in New York harbor will flash on the homes of live or seven, or some would say, ten millions of people here within cannon range of the base of her pedestal. But Chicago thinks she will have ten millions of people before you will. Great cities are growing east and west, and by and by you will begin to put the warp into the woof of your railroad system; and when your trade with South America is doubled and quadrupled, when the south begins to develop her resources and you need north and south lines, then your cities will grow faster than ever, because the crossings of railways will be multiplied. Cities spring up where great lines of transit intersect each other. Cities are growing faster than ever in every portion of our great republic; but if you had a London here at the mouth of your Hudson it would be no larger than our city of the future. Thomas Carlyle said to me once in his study in Chelsea, 'Universal suffrage in great towns inevitably lifts the scoundrel class to the summit of affairs in politics.' Wendell Phillips said to me on the doorstep of his house in Essex street in Boston, that cherished home of his where an invalid wife lay sick so long, 'The day is coming when the liquor traffic, unless we change our fashions of municipal government, will strain the government as slavery never did.' When the paths to political preferment lead through the gin-mills, free government is a farce, and its future is likely to be a tragedy."

CUPID AND THE CAT.

A Suffering Feline Came Between Two Souls That Beat as One.

He lives in Evanston, and during the past two years has been paying his addresses to one of the most charming girls on the north side. The wedding day has not been named, but their engagement was announced almost a year ago.

Several weeks ago, while they were walking home from church one Sunday night, they ran across a cat that was waiting piteously on a doorstep. "Do you hear that, Jim?" she exclaimed, grasping his arm with a closer grip. "There's something the matter with that poor little pussy. I'm going to see what ails it."

"Nonsense!" he replied. "Let's go on; the cat will take care of itself."

"No; let's see what is the trouble." Without more ado the young woman ran up to the cat and was horrified to find that the animal had evidently been run over by a wagon, as its spine was dislocated and it was barely able to crawl by dragging its hind legs.

"She's done for, sure enough," commented the Evanstonian. "She won't last long. Come on, now."

The girl suddenly straightened up to her full height. "Do you mean to say that you would leave any animal to suffer like this? There is a drugstore on the next corner. Run over there and buy an ounce of chloroform. Hurry, now, there's a dear!"

"Nonsense! You don't suppose I'm going into the business of doctoring sick cats on the streets at night, do you? Be sensible."

"And you don't suppose I'm going to let this cat suffer here, do you? Go and bring me a bottle of chloroform instantly."

"I won't do it."
"But I insist."
"You certainly can't be in earnest?"
"I certainly am. If you don't do it I will go after it myself."
"You want to make me appear ridiculous?"

"Hurry up, dear!" For a moment the young man did not stir. The blood rushed to his face, and he began to grow angry. "See here!" he exclaimed. "This is carrying matters entirely too far. I will permit no woman to make a fool of me like this. I'll get your chloroform if you really insist, but I warn you—you'll never have a chance to do such a trick again. I will never have anything to do with you again. Mark that!"

"Get the chloroform."
"If I do everything is over between us."
"All right; bring it."
Two minutes later a fine lace handkerchief saturated with the anesthetic was applied by a fair, white hand to the nose of the suffering brute and the wailing ceased.

Here this story should end. A regard for the truth, however, compels the addition of the statement that the young man thus far has actually carried his threat into execution and the prospect of that wedding grows dimmer and dimmer.—Chicago Mail.

A Successful Ruse.

A couple of thirsty fellows who had been loafing all the forenoon on the quays at Stockholm were struck with a brilliant idea. They borrowed an old brandy keg and half filled it with water. Then one of them slung it on his shoulder and took it to the nearest spirit vault, where he stated that he had been sent by one of the skippers in port to have the keg filled with brandy.

"The captain is sorry he only got it half full yesterday and thinks it would be better to have it filled to the top."
The keg was accordingly held under the tap till it was full, and the fellow hoisted it on his shoulder, but as he was about to walk off with it he was stopped by the clerk, who demanded payment for the spirits.

"Hasn't our skipper a running account?"
"Certainly not."
"Bless me! I must have gone to the wrong shop! There is nothing for it but to empty half the keg back again."
This was no sooner said than done; after which our hero merrily went in search of his companion.—Dagbladet.

The Indian Attendants on the Queen.

The Indian attendants who now invariably accompany the queen are a source of great trouble to the court officials who have charge of the various arrangements. The Indians require to travel by themselves in a separate saloon, and their meals and all refreshments must be served to them in the train at the stopping stations instead of their going to the buffets with the suite and the European servants.

Special arrangements have also to be made for the Indians at the hotels, which cause much bother and considerable extra expense. Yet they have practically no duties and are perfectly useless except for show.—London Tit-Bits.

Taking Off a Horse Collar.

It is not always ignorant persons who fail to observe closely. Coleridge and Wordsworth took a drive with a friend. After great difficulty the horse was unharnessed, except they could not get the collar off. One of them said it was a "downright impossibility" and that the horse's head must have grown since the collar was put on. "La, master," said a girl, "turn the collar upside down."—Housekeeper.

THE BELBUOY.

Like a restless, troubled spirit,
Self accused beyond excusing,
Seeking rest where none is offered,
Vainly striving for release—
Writes the bellbuoy in the ocean
As each wave in mad commotion
Buffets it without relenting,
Or a whispered word of peace.

Sunbeams may each day caress it,
Or the storm king howl above it,
To each one the wall goes upward
In a never ending moan,
And the glistening sea gulls hear it
As they hover and pass near it,
And the rocky shores repeat it
In a muffled undertone.

Oh, the pathos of its life song,
Changing not as years roll onward—
Its one note of weary wailing
Outward borne unceasingly!
Prisoner in Neptune's clasp,
Chafing under cord and halving—
Angel thou of mercy! warning
Countless souls that pass thee by.

—Katharine H. Terry in Good Housekeeping

Polite Photographers.

The knack which French photographers, and especially those of Paris possess in relieving their sitters of a constrained and distressed look while sitting for their portraits has long been the envy and perplexity of photographers of other nations. An American photographer, on a recent visit to Paris, took pains to study the means by which this very desirable result was reached.

He reports that it all lies in a very simple device, which well illustrates the nature of the Frenchman.

When a lady, for instance, is sitting to a photographer for a portrait, the operator does not, in a perfunctory manner, coldly request her to "Look pleasant now, ma'am!" He says to her, in the most natural and graceful manner in the world:

"It's quite unnecessary to ask madam to look pleasant; she could not look otherwise!"

The lady of course acknowledges the compliment with her most gracious and highbred smile. "Click!" goes the camera and the picture is obtained, revealing the sitter at her highwater mark, as it were.—Youth's Companion.

How a Prisoner Escaped.

If we will only rightly use little things it is surprising how much many sometimes be done with them. A vizier, having offended his royal master, was condemned to lifelong imprisonment in a high tower, and every night his wife used to come and weep at its foot. "Go home," said the husband, "and find a black beetle, and then bring a bit of butter and three strings—one of fine silk, one of stout twine, another of whipcord—and a strong rope."

When she came provided with everything he told her to put a touch of butter on the beetle's head, tie the silk thread around him and place him on the wall of the tower. Deceived by the smell of butter, which he supposed was above him, the insect continued to ascend till he reached the top, and thus the vizier secured the silk thread. By it he pulled up the twine, then the whipcord, and then a strong rope, by which he finally escaped.—Detroit Free Press.

The Earth to Be Like the Moon.

The water of the earth is all destined to disappear from the surface of the globe by being absorbed by subterranean rocks, with which it will form chemical combinations. The heavenly spheres exhibit sufficiently striking examples of such an evolution. The planet Mars shows what will become of the earth in some thousands of centuries. Its seas are only shallow Mediterranean of less surface than the continents, and these do not appear to be very high; and in the appearance of the moon, all cracked and dried up, we have a view of the final state of the earth—for the absorption of the water by the solid nucleus will be followed by that of the atmosphere.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Modern Way.

In India they drown a great many of the girl babies. It is a time honored custom, but not universally approved from a therapeutic standpoint. In civilized countries they put corsets on the girl babies, which brings about the same results, without the shock, which is a sure concomitant of the Indian method. Moreover, babies last longer under the modern system, and it is especially prized by people who prefer to keep their girl babies for a few brief years.—Detroit Tribune.

What a Flood Leaves Behind.

The worst feature of a flood is the fact that the river is apt to leave a deposit of sand, varying in thickness from one inch to ten feet, over a large extent of land that was formerly fertile. In the flood of 1858 a great many farmers in the American Bottom on going back to their premises after the subsidence of the waters, found their property covered with river sand in beds so thick that two or three years elapsed before good crops could be raised.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Place for Him to Call.

Mrs. Witherby—Your old clothes man was around today.

Witherby (grimly)—Tell him next time that, if he wants to look at any old clothes of mine, he will have to call at the office and see them on me.—Exchange.

How Ants Are Eaten.

Ants are eaten by several of the minor nations. In Egypt they are eaten raw, with sugar; in Brazil they are served with a resinous sauce, and in East India stewed in buffalo grease or fried in butter.—St. Louis Republic.
