WE HAVE CURED THESE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

NERVOUS DEBILITY AND WEAKNESS.
CHAS. R. RAY, Mich., November 1st, 1890.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—In reply to your letter, have to say that I feel your Sanden Electric Belt one of the greatest inventions of the nineteenth century, and consider it a most powerful agent for good among the many afflicted on this earth, and I know that enough and several times over. I have used it for the particular greatest satisfaction. As to myself I am a well man today from wearing one of your electric belts, and an electric sound better than before using it. I cheerfully and truthfully recommend your belt.
H. N. WILKIN, 30 Shawmut Avenue.

GENERAL DEBILITY, NERVOUSNESS.
MEWATER, Wis., August 7th, 1890.
Dr. A. T. Sanden, Dear Sir:—The Electric Belt I received from you has done me a great deal of good. I can say it has done more for me than all the medicine I have taken in the last three years. I was in a bad condition, suffering greatly from general debility, nervousness, etc., and my blood was very poor. I weighed at the time 145 lbs. and the belt 150 lbs., but at present I weigh 160 lbs.
I recommend your belt to all who are afflicted with the above troubles. DR. SANDEN, 169 La Salle St., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or at rest, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or organs, or $5,000. It has an improved Electric Suspensory, the greatest boon ever given weak men, and we warrant it to cure any of the above weaknesses, and to relieve shrunken limbs, or parts, or Money Refunded. They are graded in strength to meet all cases of weakness in young, middle-aged or old men, and will cure the worst cases in two or three months.

Ignacio Galvan, a young Spaniard who went to the City of Mexico, from New Orleans, where he resided for several years, has been arrested and placed in Belem prison on the charge of swindling. He had carried on his operations on an extensive scale, and had already realized a profit of several thousand dollars.
He brought with him to Mexico a large number of confederate bills, which he had secured in New Orleans. He found no difficulty in passing these bills on the smaller storekeepers of the city as genuine American currency, and received the change in Mexican coin. His arrest was brought about through an American locomotive engineer, who saw the man pay a large bill at a small restaurant with the worthless money. When arrested Galvan had $200 of the bills in his pocket and a large quantity in his trunk. He is thought to have worked Monterey, San Luis Potosi and other cities of Mexico in the same manner.

A VARNISHED TALE.

When Mr. and Mrs. Blank of Joy street went to Europe on their wedding tour, Blank took his kodak along. His lovely Emmeline thought he was "perfectly horrid" to think of anything that would distract his attention from her, and poor Blank had a hard time to squaring himself.
He had wisely concluded that a kodak would let them down easy on the billing and cooing business. A long married friend had warned him that there would be torrents of tears upon the first indication of a letup in his attentions, and this he proposed to disguise by clever strategy.

His scheme worked like a charm. Their mutual infatuation gradually shifted from each other to the little black box, and the button was pressed with ever increasing interest. The outcome of it was that Blank became an unmitigated crank on the subject of photography. His private den was converted into a regular laboratory as soon as they had returned and were settled at homekeeping. The shelves were filled with negatives, transparencies and films, and the table was covered with burnishers, developers, type trays and other accessories of photography.

One evening not long ago Mr. and Mrs.
Blank came over from Charlotte avenue to spend the evening. The air was as sharp as needles, and when they arrived poor Mrs. Blank was nearly wild with neuralgia in her face. Mrs. Blank is a sympathetic little creature, and she flew around to get relief for her visitor. She found some neuralgia pills, but they seemed to do no good.
"There is a bottle of liniment in the house that is just splendid if I could find it," she said. "James got it for me, and it gave almost immediate relief."

Then the little lady went into her husband's private den to look for the bottle, while Blank went into the library to have a quiet smoke with Blank. Mrs. Blank prowled about smelling the bottles until she was almost ill, and finally found one that she was sure contained the liniment.
The label read, "Anthony's Quick Drying Varnish," but the lady did not stop to read it.

The sufferer leaned back in her chair, and Mrs. Blank stopped on a liberal coating of the varnish. Any one who has handled negative varnish knows with what wonderful rapidity it is transformed from a thin liquid to a glaze as hard as glass and as tough as leather. Mrs. Blank's face was puckered up into the most awful expression her features could assume when the application was made.

"There," said her attendant, "I know that will relieve you in a few minutes." Mrs. Blank really felt that there was some mysterious virtue in the remedy. She tried to smile languidly and say, "Thanks, I am better now," but found it utterly impossible. Her lips were glued together as if the seal of silence had been forever set upon them, and her face was like that of a graven image.

She made a queer little noise in her throat like a strangled shriek, and her eyes began to roll horribly as she claved at her varnish bound features.
Then it dawned upon Mrs. Blank that she had made a terrible mistake. She had used chloroform instead of liniment and her dear friend was dying. In one brief instant she saw herself in the prisoners' dock, the place crowded with sympathizing friends and the judge removing the kinks from his patriarchal beard as he prepared to give her a life sentence.

It was too horrible to contemplate, and Mrs. Blank shrieked aloud with terror.
The two gentlemen nearly fell over each other in their haste to enter the room.
"Great heavens! what's the matter?" they shouted as they saw Mrs. Blank's contortions and Mrs. Blank's look of horror.
"This is terrible," said Blank. "My poor fellow, you must bear it like a man. It's a stroke of paralysis."

Blank nearly had a fit at this announcement. He caught his stricken wife in his arms and kissed her with impassioned fervor. The kiss seemed to slip away like water sliding from a duck's back. Blank felt as if he had kissed a nickel plated col-dove.

"What the devil's this?" he exclaimed, gazing in consternation at the polished glaze on his wife's face.

"I—I have killed her," faltered Mrs.
Blank, sinking into a heap on the floor.
The bottle was still clasped in her hand, and Blank saw the label.
"Do you mean to say you have been using that stuff for liniment?" he inquired.
His wife could only gasp an affirmative.
Mrs. Blank will never forget the look her husband gave her at that moment. Then he burst into a roar of laughter. When he could stop long enough to explain, he appeared the indignation of the others. They tried benzine and gasoline without avail, and it was only after half a pint of alcohol had been applied as a dissolvent that Mrs.
Blank could smile again.

There were strained relations between the two families for several days, but it is all over now. They are friends again, but the little episode will never be forgotten.— G. B. C. in Detroit News.

Get a Good Match First.

His stoop was quite correct, his hat was of the right shade and breadth of brim, his neck was muffled in a silk scarf, his hair was brushed forward, and his hooked handle cane was carried at the proper angle. He was a robustly rounded young man, smoked a cigar instead of a cigarette and was altogether a good, healthy specimen of chappie, dear boy. One might have been deceived into the supposition that he was capable of original thought.

The guest to whom he sent his card was out. As he turned to leave the office counter he reached for a match in the silver box.
Then he fumbled around and scratched it several times fruitlessly. Finally in that helpless, baby way that overcomes chappies when upset in the throes of a dilemma he said to the clerk:

"Aw, how do you scratch these matches, yeknow?"

"Take a good match and simply strike it on the marble. You can use the seat of your trousers if you like," was the response, and the bell boy buried their faces in their hands and sobbed.—Washington Star.

The Immensity of Space.

Says an amateur in astronomy: "One of the most startling facts that I have learned about other worlds than ours, and one that brings the immensity of the sun before the mind in an impressively practical way, is this: That if the earth were placed at the center of the sun, and the moon should retain the same relative position it now has, the distance from the earth to the moon would be only a little more than half the distance from the center of the sun to its circumference—that is, the entire orbit of the moon, 480,000 miles in diameter, is not much more than half the size of the sun, which is over 860,000 miles in diameter.
It seems to me that nothing can convey to the mind an idea of the immensity of some things in the universe and the smallness of others—our earth for example—in a more practical way than this plain statement of simple astronomical facts."—New York Tribune.

The Approaching Yachting Season.

The launching of Mr. Carroll's 84-foot yacht, which has been successfully accomplished in America from the famous yard of the Horreshoffs, reminds us of the approach of a yachting season of an importance hitherto unequalled. Since 1851, when the America won the Royal Yacht Squadron cup, there have been numerous contests between the old and the new countries for the sailing championship, but the vessel that is built of sufficient sturdiness to adventure the Atlantic passage is at a notorious disadvantage when pitted against a rival whose construction demands no such solidity. According to designers on both sides of the western ocean, the present rating rules of both England and America have a tendency to produce machines rather than the desired "wholesome type" of yacht, and under their provisions comfort has to be sacrificed to speed.

On the other hand, a yacht that can cross the Atlantic must at least be reckoned seaworthy, and that she should be worsted by a stay-at-home machine takes much of the sting out of defeat. During the coming season, however, no such unsatisfactory conclusion will be possible.
If Mr. Carroll's sloop be beaten in English waters and Lord Dunraven's cutter in American, we can at least cry quits, but if the victory fall on both sides to the same nation, there can be no longer any question as to her claim to pre-eminence for the time. The prizes on either side are of nearly similar importance, and their defenders will be about equally numerous.—London Saturday Review.

A Deer Story.

Last fall Mr. Walling, whose farm adjoins the village of Haliburton, had two acres and a half of Swede turnips. Of these he gathered two acres, putting them in heaps and covering them with about six inches of straw. The half acre was not harvested. Mr. Walling's intention was to draw the turnips which were in heaps as soon as the first snow came, but the intention was not carried out and the snow covered the heaps and preserved the turnips. Last week Mr. Walling decided to commence feeding the turnips and took a sleigh to the turnip field. The heaps were all gone. Every turnip had been eaten by deer. More than that, the half acre had been carefully gone over by the herd of deer, and every turnip had been grubbed out of the ground and eaten, 1,000 bushels in all being eaten. The marks of the deer were seen in every direction, and there must have been 9 or 10. The field where the turnips were consumed is not more than three-quarters of a mile from the village postoffice, going as the crow flies.
—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Device to Shut Off Steam Power.

The machine shop of J. W. Russell on Taylor street, where the ideas of many valuable inventions have been worked out, has just put forth a new contrivance which promises to be exceedingly useful.
It is a method of stopping an engine by means of an electric button from any part of a shop. Many times accidents happen in various rooms of factories which could easily have been prevented if it were not necessary to run down to the engine room before the machinery could be stopped.

The idea of stopping it by electricity has been tried before, but never by a process so simple and sure as this. The idea was developed by John Stannard of this city and was perfected Monday, after four months' hard labor on it. The whole mechanism occupies not more than a cubic foot of space.—Springfield Republican.

Our Feathered Gamins.

"Och, Mike, would ye luk! Here's a pie indade!" said a workman engaged in shoveling away the snow about a big building in course of erection. His shovel had laid low an enormous snowdrift where the wind had whirled fiercely about a corner, and in the bottom of it were the frozen bodies of 20 or 30 English sparrows. It was a pie indeed, and there were many such baked last winter.
Millions of the fierce little birds perished from the stress of winter, and it will take years of breeding to bring back the cheerful army, the feathered gamins of our streets and the brightest little soldiers among us, for, when all's said and done, one cannot help liking the sparrow for his courage and his infinite cheerfulness under adverse circumstances. He is a constant example to the blue and downhearted.—New York Herald.

Poor Paderewski.

Paderewski's manager has come to the pianist's assistance to keep the girls away. The persistency with which they insist upon waylaying the pianist in town and out of town, in the wings on his way from the stage to his dressing room, has led to the omission from the programme of the Paderewski recitals a list of the pianist's future engagements, with the times and places of his appearances. This has been done at the request of Paderewski, who was forced into some measure of protection from the mob of women who have pestered and followed him everywhere. Poor Paderewski!—Boston Herald.

The Prisoner Sought Seclusion.

Of all the ludicrous things which are told of the condition of the discipline in the Massachusetts state prison, that story of the convict Booth, who, having appointed himself chairman of a committee to select a testimonial to the retiring warden, coolly picked out headquarters and hung up a sign, "No Admittance," which was duly respected by the prison guards, is the most amazing.
If we don't look out, this extraordinary Charlestown bastille will soon be figuring in comic opera.—Boston Journal.

Land at $250 Per Foot.

Some land in Cornhill, London, has recently been sold at the rate of $2,000-400 per acre. The land included five shops, covering altogether 2,500 feet, superficial, and it was sold for £113,000, or at the rate of about £50 per foot. Two more shops in the same street, having an area of about 2,500 feet, were bought in for £160,000.—London Tit-Bits.
