An Old Plattsmouth Citizen Tells of the

Cripple Creek Fire. CRIPPLE CREEK, May 5 .- (To the editor of THE NEWS)-Thinking that some of my old friends in Plattsmouth might wish to hear of our great conflagration here, I will give you a brief statement of what has occurred in this the greatest gold camp on earth. On April 25 we had a population here of at least 30,000, and a city containing Judge Shiras in Omaha yesterday, many fine business blocks and many flimsy wooden structures, together Johnny Fitzpatrick caught a tourist with a set of as wide-awake, active business men as any city ever could boast of. About I o'clock on that day a fire started in the southeast part of the business portion of the city, and in about two hours one-fourth of the be elected to fill the positions in the business portion and a large portion public schools of this city and there of the residence part was laid in 3,000 letter-boxes mostly full of mail; the First National bank; a large number of stores, both small and great, and worth of property and rendered thousfortune, yet none were discouraged, and before the fires had all gone out new buildings were rising like magic rom the smoking ruins. But we were still further doomed. On the 29th another fire started, and in two hours county, Colorado, where he has a time three-fourths of what was left about one tool of exchange, one unit of value and was swept out, and the entire business hotel, worth $75,000; the Palace hotel, just completed, and many other costly brick buildings, together with the residence part of the city.

A fierce wind was blowing and the dames would roll up, leap over and start fires two blocks in advance. We had a splendid fire department and plenty of water, but all were powerless-the heat being so intense that enough to reach the flames, and the my wife hurridly gathered our clothes together and induced two men to remove them to the middle of a vacant lot. Just then I arrived and we started up the mountain to avoid the flames, but before reaching our place of safety we looked back and saw the home we had just left behind go down with everything in it. We stood on that moutain-side and watched the scene below. Such a signt is seldom seen. The flames rolling, hissing; huge columns of smoke curling up and obscaring the light; the boom of the explosions in blowing up the buildings; the flying debris; the rushing of men women and children with horror and despair pictured on every face; rushing vehicles loaded with goods of every description; people trying to escape; the shouts of the firemen and the wail of distress, all commingled in one awful sound, reminded one of a graphic picture of Hades. The flames swept on, until forty blocks in the very centre of the city were swept from the face of the earth. The fire eased about 3 p. m., and that night the mountain was ablaze with campfires-even small groups of men, women and children huddled around the little bundles they had saved, wrapped in quilts and blankets, with nothing to eat and no covering except the blue sky. Then the work of relief commenced. The railways put on extra trains and carried thousands of people to Victor. Colorado Spring, Denver, Wyoming and other cities had provisions and necessities on the track ready for dis ribution. Relief committees were appointed, and soon all were fed. Bedding and clothing came in by the car-load, and by evening of the 30th nearly all had been fed and cared for. l'housands of people were rendered homeless and also thousands who had been comfortably fixed were penniless objects of charity. One would suppose that in the face of such disaster all would be discouraged and lay down, but not so with us. W. S. Straton, the owner of the Independence mine, telegraphed from Colorado Springs that ne had a million dollars to give towards rebuilding Cripple Creek, and telegrams come pouring in from capisaying that all the money wanted could be had. That night the work of building commenced, and at the end of the third day 107 buildings were up and the owners doing business in them, and in one day over 100 contracts were made for the erection of brick buildings, which will be from two to four stories, costing about $2,000 to $2,000, 000 each. There are now at work in the city over 1,000 mechanics in rebuilding, and the sound of the hammer and saw is heard day and night. Within the next ninety days there will arise from the ashes a greater Cripple Creek than was dreamed of before. Such exhibitions of pluck was never equalled. Lots are higher than ever before and everyone is scrambling to get hold of one. The lumber offices are surrounded by men stand-ing in line to give in their orders, and lawyers are working day and night drawing contracts. A vigilance com-mittee, consisting of 100 men, has been formed, and every tough is run out of the city. As soon as the frame and floor is in, men commence unload ing goods into it and opening up bus ness. This is but a brief description but I must close. Yours truly, S. P. VANATTA. To Brothers Sherman and Todd. The free silverites are no worse than the Ishaelites who bought Joseph at a bargain, paying silver. They are no worse than Judas was, who sold out his interest in his best friend for thirty pieces of silver. I think on the whole they are octter. They tell us that making gold the unit of alue and only legal tender will injure the debtor class. Why so? The law is that a debtor can pay a debt of any amount in silver dollars, no matter if the silver dollars are worth only 54 able to obtain any clue to the thief or cents in gold. No "expost facto" law can be passed. The law in force when the debt was ontracted will govern. The hundreds of milons of debts can all be paid in our present silver dollars. Then what wrong is done the debtor class? If gold ever becomes the only legal tender, men will not pay so much for the property they buy, either cash down or on time. A man has a right when buying property to offer what cinct recognize him to be an energetic he pleases and what he pleases to pay in.
