TO REFORM THE TAX SYSTEM.

Twenty Bills Introduced Covering the Subject.

Some of Them Decidedly Radical, While Others Would Perhaps Be a Good Thing for the Masses—No Oil Rooms As Yet Put In An Appearance—Other Notes.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 2.—(Special to THE NEWS).—The desire of the people for a reform of the present and old-time methods of assessment for taxation is apparent from the number of bills introduced to correct this wrong. I think it safe to say that twenty bills are on the files of the two houses covering this subject in some form or other. One of these, which struck me as peculiar and, perhaps, radical, is that which compels the holders of all forms of securities to file such instruments with the county clerk, where they shall be taxed by the county commissioners, and providing that no instrument shall be collectible which is not so filed for taxation. That such a measure would result in largely increasing the amount of personal property tax is apparent on its face. Other bills propose that property shall be assessed at its real cash value, and make it a penal offense not to do so. What will be done is, of course, problematic.

The proposed Lincoln charter is, next to the Omaha charter, the biggest bill yet introduced. It is an anti-monopoly measure, and likely to pass. It reduces the number of councilmen from fourteen to five, and gives the city the right to buy out the street railways, the gas and electric light companies, or to annul their charters on certain conditions. It covers the ground of local government very completely, but is opposed, of course, by all the elements that have ruled in this city for years.

Not many bills have as yet passed both houses, but much work has been done by the committees, and the passing of bills will come faster later on.

Whatever else may be said of this legislature, no "oil" rooms have as yet been opened in any of the committee rooms, and thus far the atmosphere has not been tainted with boodism. Later on when the bills affecting the stock yards at South Omaha, the insurance preserves, the express and telephone companies, came up for consideration, no doubt a lobby will appear—how affectively time will tell. In general both bodies seem to be made up of men who are untrammeled and near nobody's collar. They will doubtless make mistakes, but they will not be serious ones. When you know that a man is true at heart and honest you can forgive his errors of judgment, but if he is rotten at heart you despise him, no matter how smart he is. C. W. S.

THE STULL WILL CONTEST.

Judge Ramsey of This City To Preside at the Trial.

A special to the State Journal from Auburn says: "District court convened last evening at 7:30 for the trial of the Stull will case, Judge Ramsey of Plattsmouth presiding. A jury was empaneled and the opening statement on behalf of contestants and then court adjourned to 9 a. m. today. Contestant William Stull of Lincoln is represented by W. S. Summers and C. C. Flansburg of Lincoln, and A. J. Burnham of this city. Proponent Judge John S. Stull is represented by W. H. Kelliger and G. W. Cornell of this city, and Judge E. W. Thomas of Falls City. Attorneys for both parties say it will take all week to try the case. There are 1,000 pages of depositions to be read, most of which are those of parties at the old home in Illinois. The case promises to be one of the hottest contests ever had in this county."

Meeting of the Aid Society.

The ladies of the Presbyterian Aid society were entertained by Mrs. John Waterman at her home yesterday afternoon. This being the first business meeting of the year, the election of officers for the ensuing year was held, which resulted as follows: President—Mrs. J. H. Waterman. First Vice-Pres—Mrs. J. T. Baird. Second Vice-Pres—Mrs. F. E. White. Secretary—Mrs. Agnew. Treasurer—Mrs. P. E. Ruffner. After the business meeting was over, an hour of social was enjoyed, followed by the serving of dainty refreshments by the hostess. The society adjourned to meet in two weeks with Mrs. David Miller.

Louisa's Jubilee Singers.

A large and appreciative audience gathered at the Presbyterian church last evening to hear the Fisk Jubilee Singers. The concert was an artistic success in every particular. The part songs were fine, as well as the solos. Louisa was in good voice, and the audience testified their appreciation by numerous encores. The trio "Lift Thine Eyes," from Elijah, was perhaps the gem of the evening's entertainment, but it is difficult to discriminate where all was so good. It is safe to say should they again visit Plattsmouth they will be greeted with a full house.

LETTER FROM THE WEST.

A Former Cass County Lady Tells About the Home of the Blizzard.

To the Editor of THE NEWS: INKSTER, N. D., Jan. 29.—THE SEMI-WEEKLY NEWS-HERALD from Plattsmouth reached me last evening and was read with eager interest, as it always is being as a visitor from the old home state—telling me of its welfare, its prosperity, the well-being of its inhabitants and lastly its severely cold weather with the ice on the river ten inches thick and the men with teams rushing out before 6 o'clock in the morning with might and main to gather in the crystal cubes and store them away in the ice houses ere the sun should beam out as it does in Nebraska and reduce them to water again.

I wish I might tell you of a winter in good earnest—one that settled down to business the latter part of October with a sleet first, then wet snow which seemed to freeze fast to the ground and make good sleighing. The sleighs were running merrily in the streets of Grand Forks on the last day of October. Then the Red river began freezing over. I stood by the window and watched what seemed to be little circles of ice and snow eddying round in the current getting larger and larger and collecting in masses till at last the river was entirely bridged over, the weather becoming colder all the time and the snow continued falling until the whole surface was covered and all the country white—the cleanest, whitest snow I ever saw.

The ice men predicted an early harvest of ice, but the heavy fall of snow weighed the ice down so the water rose over it and made snow-ice—which is not good. The only way out of the difficulty was to clear away the snow, cut out the snow-ice and make a clear field and leave it to freeze over again. In this way they got a good quality, but the labor is more than double. The first cutting was a little more than two feet thick and very hard to handle, but they take their time. There is no danger of a thaw. We have bright, pleasant days, but none warm enough to spoil the ice. Nebraska people could never imagine the depth of snow here. In Melinto, Walsh county, the artist has made photographs of several snow scenes. One lady was photographed on top of a drift thirty-five feet high, and some men had their pictures taken sitting on the cross pieces on top of the telegraph poles with their feet resting on the drifted snow.

In some places the stables are drifted under. One man had to dig a hole through the drift to get into his stable, and some houses can only be entered through the second story windows. At Christmas time the weather was quite pleasant, but throughout this month we have had a succession of storms or blizzards with intense cold—the thermometer sometimes reaching thirty-eight to forty degrees below zero. At such times men wanted mittens for their noses. Tobogganing is good. People go up on top of the stable and slide down, and it is lots of fun. I wish to say, though, that this is an exceptionally stormy winter—the worst for years. I have been in Dakota nineteen years, and but one other winter has been as bad as this. Still people come here and stay, and those who do go away, come back and invariably say Dakota is good enough and they are glad to get back. Why I can never tell you. For my own part I often think a less vigorous climate would be more agreeable, but I might be like the rest were I to make a change.

Mrs. Maggie Hawkins Jones.

Mr. Bryan Undecided. W. J. Bryan is down on the coast near Galveston, Tex., engaged in hunting in company with ex-Governor Hogg. In an interview he said: "I will probably lecture in Galveston before leaving the state, and from there I will go directly to my home in Lincoln, Neb. I do not know in just what manner my public work will be carried on, but so far I have refused several good offers, which would, had I accepted them, have interfered with my public education of the people on the silver question. I have received one offer of $3,000 per annum from a legal firm, and another offer of $25,000 per annum from a certain newspaper to become a member of its editorial staff. I refused both offers, for the reason that I do not want to give up my friends for entering the lecturing field. Their criticism, however, is unjust, as I have been no more taking advantage of my notoriety in delivering lectures than I would be were I to engage in the practice of law, or to engage in any other vocation. I must do something to make a living, and having cancelled my present lecturing contract, I am not ready to state, until I reach Lincoln, just what my plans are."

THE AMERICAN NILE.

SUCH IS THE GREAT RIO GRANDE WITH ITS VAGARIES.

It is a River of Freakish Habits and Must Be Seen More Than Once To Be Understood—Flows Mainly Underground, but at Times There Is a Torrent on Top. "It's a river 1,500 miles long, measured in its windings," said the man from New Mexico, speaking of the Rio Grande. "For a few miles, at its mouth, light draft steamers run up from the gulf of Mexico. Above that it doesn't float a craft except at ferries. In the old days, when New Mexico was a province of Spain, the people along the river didn't even have ferries, and the only way they had of getting across was by fording. For this purpose a special breed of large horses was reared to be kept at the fords. When the river was too high for these horses to wade across, travelers camped on the bank and waited for the waters to subside. Now there are bridges over the river at the larger Rio Grande towns, and in other places rope ferries and rowboats are the means of crossing.

"In times of low water a stranger seeing its current for the first time would be apt to think slightly of the Rio Bravo del Norte, as the New Mexicans love to call the great river. Meandering in a small part of a very wide channel he would see only a little muddy stream, for ordinarily nine-tenths of the Rio Grande is underground, the water soaking along toward the gulf through the sands beneath its channel. The valley, bounded everywhere to left and right by mountains or foothills, is sandy, and the water, percolating the sands down to hard pan, spreads out on each side so that it may always be found anywhere in the valley by digging down to the level of the river's surface. For the greater part of the year the river above ground flows swift and muddy, narrowing as it swirls round a sand bar and widening over shallows. But the thing that strikes the stranger most queerly is its disappearance altogether for reaches, many miles in length, of its channel, which, except it may be, for a water hole here and there, is as dry as Sahara. The river is keeping right along about its business, however, and where a rock reef or clay bed blocks its subterranean current it emerges to the surface and takes a fresh start above ground, running as a big stream which, farther down, may lose itself in the sands again.

"It is when the floods come down that the Rio Grande shows why it requires so big a channel for its all year round use and demonstrates that if the waterway were even wider it would be an advantage to residents along its banks. It is fed by a watershed of vast area and steep descent, which in times of rain and melting snows precipitates the waters rapidly into the channel. In June, when the snow melts on the peaks about its headwaters in Colorado and northern New Mexico, and later in the summer, when heavy showers and cloudbursts are the order of the day, the Rio Grande overflows its banks, deluging wide tracts of valley and sometimes carving a new channel for itself, changing its course for miles. Where the valley is unusually wide and sandy, as below Sleta and in the Merilla valley, the old channels in which the river used to flow are plainly indicated in the landscape.

Ladies' Clubs in London.

The rise of ladies' clubs in England is a fact that the social historian cannot afford to overlook; for it is a sign of the times. The division of labor between the two sexes is no longer summed up by Kingsley's line, "Men must work, and women must weep," since women work, too, nowadays, and hence have less time and occasion for weeping. Then the old-fashioned pleading, "Poor dear! he works so hard all day, he must have some amusement in the evening," is gradually disappearing before the consciousness that women too have a right to a little fun when their day's work is over. So the British matron and the English girl have started clubs for themselves; and London is growing full of them. Far be it from me, however, to suggest that fun and frivolity are the keynotes of these institutions. They have various aims to suit various needs; and as the modern English woman is inclined, on the whole, to be serious, she is apt to combine an aim and a mission with her amusement. As a result, many of the ladies' clubs have what might be described as an Object with a capital O, which justifies the members in their own eyes in partaking of their comforts and advantages.

The M. E. Revival.

Ho! everyone that thirsteth! Come, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, come ye—buy and eat, ye, come buy wine and milk without money and without price—Isa. 55:1.

The revival is going on at the M. E. church in this city. Preaching every evening of this week at 7:30; prayer meeting at 2 o'clock every afternoon. Everybody cordially invited to attend all the services. Last evening there were thirteen conversions.

It was a wonderful meeting to the people of God. Come, brothers and sisters, let us hold on our pastor's hands, and God will smile on the good work that is going on. It is hoped that business men will find time to attend these meetings. We want God-loving business men, doctors, lawyers, editors, school teachers, office clerks, hotel landlords and merchants to attend. "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice"—Prov. 29:2. Come, and go along with us, for God has spoken good concerning Israel.

From everywhere come words of praise for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Allow me to congratulate you on the merits of your Remedy. It cured me of chronic bronchitis when the doctor could do nothing for me."—CHAS. F. HEMEL, Toledo, O. For sale by all druggists.

The farmers of California are going strongly into sugar beet raising. The pioneers in the business have made so much money that others are hastening to drop their old crops to take up beet culture. The demand for sugar is practically inexhaustible, but it will not do for the farmers of Nebraska to let some other state lead them in the cultivation of the sugar beet. The factories must go to the best and largest beet fields. These fields ought by all means to be in Nebraska and not west of the Rocky mountains.—Ex.

Mr. Ward L. Smith, of Fredericktown, Mo., was troubled with chronic diarrhoea for over thirty years. He had become fully satisfied that it was only a question of a short time until he would have to give up. He had been treated by some of the best physicians in Europe and America but got no permanent relief. One day he picked up a newspaper and chanced to read an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He got a bottle of it, the first dose helped him and his continued use cured him. For sale by all druggists.
