B. B. Danhier, one of Cass county's hard working vintners, called Friday and enrolled his name for the Journal for one year. Mr. Danhier is one of the rock-ribbed democrats of the county, and we are unable to perceive how he has ever got along so successfully without the Journal.

County Superintendent Wortman finished up a ten days' trip through the county Tuesday evening. His mission was to get the annual reports of the school directors in the various districts. In his interview with the directors he found the most of them in favor of an increase in the wages of teachers.

A gentleman came into the Journal office Friday and wanted to know if we furnished fifty printed envelopes to each subscriber to our paper. We told him no, of course. He said a certain paper in this town was making that proposition. If the Journal is not worth $1.00 a year on the face of it, then we don't want people to take it. After the gentleman had looked over the Journal he said he guessed it was worth $1.00 a year without any such inducements as the other fellow offered, and "planked down" the price and left. When it comes to giving a patron fifty printed envelopes to induce him to subscribe to the Journal or to retain him on our list we are not "in it," and if the time ever comes wherein we think it becomes necessary to do such a thing to keep what subscribers we have, we will close up shop and quit business.

Judge Russell Dead.

A special to the Lincoln News, from Weeping Water, under date of July 7, says: "Judge Calvin Russell died yesterday at his home and was buried today. Judge Russell was in his seventy-ninth year, and has been confined to his bed for the last six months with general debility. He had lived in this city for nearly twenty-five years and was highly respected by all who knew him. He served three terms as county judge of this county, and as a justice of the peace most of the time he lived here. He leaves an aged widow and two single daughters who share the sympathies of a host of friends."

A Good Scheme.

H. R. Gering is a gentleman after our own heart when it comes to getting up something to entertain visitors to Plattsmouth. This morning he started out to raise money by subscription to defray the expense of procuring amusements on the streets every Saturday afternoon. We are informed he has met with considerable success in his efforts, and that almost enough has been guaranteed to make the project a sure go. Something of this kind is done in other towns, and why not in Plattsmouth?

Death of Ambrose Allen.

Ambrose Allen died of Bright's disease at his home in this city on Monday, July 6, 1903. The deceased had been a sufferer from this dread disease for some time, but had only been confined to his room a few weeks when death relieved him. Mr. Allen had been a resident of Plattsmouth for several years, and up to the date of his confinement was in the employ of Dovey & Son as deliveryman. Mr. Allen was one of those gentlemen who always had a pleasant greeting for everyone and was highly respected by all with whom he came in contact. He leaves a wife and six grown children. He was a veteran of the civil war and a member of the G. A. R., post of this city, under the auspices of which the funeral services were conducted. Brief services were conducted at the late home of the deceased on Tuesday morning, after which the remains were conveyed to Eight Mile Grove, where more extended services were held and interment made.

Gone After the Prisoner.

For some time Sheriff McBride has been trying to secure the location of the fellow who was at one time the companion in crime of young Jones, the horse thief, recently sent up from this county for one year. A few days since the sheriff received a letter from Sheriff Evans, at Marion, Iowa, stating that he had a fellow in jail there who was thought to be the fellow he wanted. He requested the sheriff to lock him up, stating that he was one of the party who stole some horses in this county. So plausible was the story told by the Iowa prisoner, that Mac became convinced that he was the man he was after, so he went about making ready to go after him. Armed with the proper papers, Sheriff McBride left yesterday afternoon for Marion, Iowa, to bring back J. W. Inlay, who is wanted here on the charge of horse stealing. The Iowa authorities claim that Inlay was willing to return without requisition papers, but Mac decided that it would be the surest way to get the fellow by preparing himself with the proper papers, and then there could be no lifts and snags about it. This is another case on which Sheriff McBride has been working for some time, and as usual when he goes after a criminal he gets him. He will return with Inlay to-morrow.

Did the Old Man Know?

While in the office last evening on business, Mr. G. W. Snyder reported to us an incident worthy of note. H. W. Vallery several years ago went to Alaska to seek his fortune. For seven years his relatives in this county could hear nothing from him, and had given him up as dead. Last April, an old Spiritualist (whose name has slipped our memory, but who will be remembered by many of our citizens) visited this city and some of the friends of Hank Vallery thought they would try his powers and learn whether he was dead or alive. The man was consulted, and he told the exact location of Hank and stated that he was alive and in good health. The relatives of Mr. Vallery wrote to the postmaster at Dawson City, inquiring as to the location of the supposed dead one, and found his location almost exactly where the old spiritualist had located him. In a short time a letter was received from Hank, and you can imagine the surprise of his friends on learning of his whereabouts and that he was in excellent health. When Hank reads this he will wonder to what extent the old man's power goes toward revealing the thoughts of the dead and the whereabouts of the living. Could the old man really tell the location of Hank Vallery or was it simply guess work?

Takes His Own Life.

The lifeless form of Thos. M. Spiers was found in a cluster of weeds, one mile south of Plattsmouth on Sunday evening, where, from all indications, it had lain for nearly twenty-four hours.

Spiers was about thirty-five years of age, and for fifteen years had been in the employ of Mr. Charles Warner, living on the Andrew Taylor farm, three miles southwest of this city. On the morning of the Fourth of July he came into town for the purpose of going to Cedar Creek to attend the celebration. Being unable to get a train for the latter place, he boarded the first east-bound train and went to Glenwood, Iowa, where he spent the day. Facts brought forth at the coroner's inquest indicate that on Spiers' return to this city in the evening, he was very despondent, and to a number of those well known to him, he stated that life was almost unbearable to him, and that it was doubtful if ever they saw him alive again. But little attention was given to these remarks, as these parties knew of his making such statements before.

From all accounts it appears that just previous to starting for home, he went to the drug store of F. G. Fricke & Co. and bought ten grains of strychnine, which he said he intended for killing rats. His action in purchasing the drug created no suspicion whatsoever. On his way home he stopped at the home of Mrs. J. C. Cummins to get a drink of water, and, as he stated, to bid them good-bye. Years ago Spiers worked for Mr. Cummins, and the family who were all sitting out on the porch at the time he called, gave him a cordial greeting, and invited him in to supper. He declined the invitation, stating that he was in a hurry. Here again he referred to his earthly existence, approaching death, accompanied by the statement that no one cared for him. His friends tried to induce him to throw aside all thoughts of taking his life, thinking that his despondency was only for the time being and that, in the morning, he would be and then turned north, which was the last seen of Spiers alive. When an hour or so later, some of his friends learning of his purchase of the strychnine, and his failure to return home, becoming somewhat alarmed, a searching party was organized, and a systematic search continued through the livelong night with no trace of the missing man when daylight arrived. The search was not abandoned by any means, but was continued through the day with renewed energy. About five o'clock Sunday evening their efforts were rewarded by finding the body as above stated. The body was brought to Streight & Streight's undertaking establishment, a post-mortem examination was held, as was also the coroner's inquest, and everything showed that his death was caused from poison, administered by himself.

The deceased has three brothers living at Missouri Valley Iowa, all of whom were notified of their brother's fate. One of them came and had the remains conveyed to Missouri Valley for interment.

Thomas Marshall Spiers was a sober, industrious man, and like everyone else, not without some peculiar characteristics, but was respected by all who knew him. He frequently referred to a little love affair, which seems to have finally caused him to take his life. He had accumulated about $1,000 in cash by hard days' work upon the farm.

That Eloping Party.

The following special dispatch to the Omaha World-Herald from Sioux City, Iowa, under date of July 7th, may be of interest to some of the readers of the Journal, from the fact that one of the principal actors is a former resident of Plattsmouth:

"Daring everything to win her sweetheart, disguising her pretty figure in boys' clothing, Bessie McNeil, of Wayne, Neb., is now a prisoner, awaiting action of an irate father. Her sweetheart, H. A. Blunt of Plattsmouth, Neb., is also under arrest."

"Her father is postmaster at Wayne and editor of the Wayne Herald. He refused to let her see Blunt and the young people decided to elope."

"Bessie got a suit of boys clothes. Garbed in these, in the middle of night, she slid down a dangerous rope to meet her lover at the bottom. Together they trudged ten miles to Wakefield, where they took the train and started for Sioux City. Although there could have been but one verdict on her clothes, and that, that they were immensely stunning, for disguising purposes they were hardly effective. Somehow or other her luxuriant and recalcitrant hair persisted in peeping out from under her jaunty derby and as her figure was never designed to be confined within the stern outlines of male attire, Bessie was recognized. Her father was notified and the arrest at South Sioux City followed. Bessie says she will stand by her lover, no matter what happens."

"On the train with the eloping couple were W. H. Gibson of Wayne and H. L. Peck of the Randolph Times. Mr. Gibson is the editor of a paper at Wayne and when he arrived in Omaha he telegraphed the eloping girl's father. She was recognized by a Wayne merchant. Mr. Peck says it was very evident that the boy's clothing covered the figure of a girl, and the elopers were closely watched during the time the newspaper men were on the train."

Death of Mrs. Adam Heil.

The death of Mrs. Adam Heil occurred on Friday, July 3, 1902, at her home nine miles west of Plattsmouth.

Mrs. Adam Heil was born in Kreis Bezirk Deiburg, Germany, August 8, 1826. She came to America in 1852, locating at Pekin, Ill., and was married in the same year to Adam Heil. To them was born eight children, five boys and three girls, of which one boy and two girls are dead. The names of those living are Wendell, William, George, Henry and Elizabeth Heil. Also twenty-seven grandchildren, of which two are dead and twenty-five living. They came to Nebraska in the spring of 1870, locating on a farm nine miles west of Plattsmouth, on which she has lived until her death, which occurred July 3, 1902. When Mr. and Mrs. Adam Heil came from Illinois they had only eighty acres of land. They have accumulated, through their hard work and savings, 1200 acres of good Cass county land, which is now worth from $75 to $80 per acre. Mrs. Heil died with a lingering sickness of diabetes, at the age of 77 years. Mrs. Heil's maiden name was Mary Lautenschlager. Brief services were held at the house and at the Glendale church, which were conducted by Rev. Jung. The interment was at the Glendale cemetery. The remains were followed to their last resting place by many friends and relatives.
