THE PRIMARY PLEDGE--ORGANIZE NOW.

The Commoner of March 17, 1905, contains the following:

"Mr. Bryan has been in receipt of a multitude of letters since the election urging organization for the campaign of 1908. The rank and file of the party are ready to begin the fight; they only await a plan of co-operation. This plan has been under consideration for some weeks and is herewith submitted.

"Let each democrat pledge himself to attend all of the primaries of his party to be held between now and the next democratic national convention, unless unavoidably prevented, and to use his influence to secure a clear, honest and straightforward declaration of the party's position on every question upon which the voters of the party desire to speak.

"This plan does not involve the writing of a platform in advance of the primaries; it does not rest upon the paramount importance of any one issue. It recognizes the right of the democratic voters to control the policy of the democratic party, and to determine its position upon public questions. It also recognizes the importance of honesty and sincerity in politics.

"This proposition will appeal to all who believe in the rule of the people—to all who are willing that the majority shall govern in party management and in the nation. It does not mean that those who exert themselves to secure a good platform—that is a question which each must determine for himself—but it does mean that the democratic platform shall give voice to the prevailing sentiment of the democratic party, and that the party shall take the country into its confidence. The pledge proposed is a primary pledge—because the people speak at the primaries. The national convention is attended by delegates and each delegate represents tens of thousands of democrats. The state con-

Carry the Fight to the Country.

The railroads are having all of a "square deal" at the hands of the Senate. It is confidently asserted that nothing more than an emasculated measure will come out of the Senate's Interstate Commerce Committee, which has occupied the vacation in going through the form of a hearing on the Esch-Townsend measure.

That measure passed the House in short order. It was the President's bill and the public mind favored it. It called for actual rate restriction, giving the power of regulation to the Interstate Commerce Commission; the plan formulated by the administration upon which public opinion had settled. Representatives were compelled to ignore other considerations and vote for it. The forces led by Speaker Cannon in sympathy with the controlling power in the Senate were insufficient to defeat it. Cannon had come out boldly with a declaration that nothing would be done toward regulating railroad rates, but with all his machinery he could neither force nor frighten the Congressmen who had their ears to the ground.

Fear of the party machinery is great, but it is nothing to the fear of what the voters may do at home. Representatives dared not go back to their constituents with a record of having voted to thwart the President in his attempts at needed reforms, and particularly his effort at controlling the railroads by proper and equitable regulation. Nothing is closer to the constituents of the average Congressman than the railroad question; it is, so to speak, at their very doors and the impositions of railways have a direct effect. Representatives are very much closer to the people than are Senators, are more easily recalled and recalled in quicker time. So it was that the measure passed the House and the people got a "square deal" to that extent.

The Senate comes very far from being of the people, by the people; and the said people have rarely come farther from getting a "square deal" in that body than in the present Senate. Secure in control of their respective machines at home, which in most instances exist for no other object than to set at naught popular desires, the old guard of the g. o. p. have run things literally to suit themselves and a class of interests that come almost within the meaning of "clients." The railway crowd have managed the rate proposition with a magnificent regard for themselves and an open score of what the public wishes. The rate hearing has had a striking resemblance to farce. Almost every witness called before the investigating committee has been one who would testify to the reasonableness and fairness of rates and the general virtues of the roads and would attack the Esch-Townsend bill, while a clipping bureau in aid of the lobby on the outside has carefully weeded out of the news it was widely distributing such of the testimony as was not favorable. Instead of getting a "square deal," the public interest has been abused and soaped.

Friends of the administration's measure or policy have given up hope that any bill will come out of the Senate committee along the lines of Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations. On the other hand, there is nothing to indicate that the President will lay down the fight.

Some weeks ago the suggestion came with apparent authority from the President that he would stump the United States during the summer in behalf of his rate and other reform policies. Something might be done with the Senate in the fall provided the President will follow this course and stir up the land. He will put party supremacy in the scales by demanding the support of the people for what is obviously right—and what is essentially Democratic. The next congressional election will put in power none but men who will stand by the exponent and champion of restrictive measures of this character, provided he makes his championship clear and convincing to the country. If, possible, as heretofore contended, Mr. Roosevelt should undertake the stumping tour.

Even the Senate in a crisis may be compelled to yield to public pressure. It takes more than the frame of a machine to sustain senatorial place and power; the people have to be relied on in the end. The process by which the Senate is reached is slow, generally speaking, but it is sure.

On the Eve of a Political Millenium.

The acceptance by President Roosevelt of the invitation of the Iroquois club to their banquet at Chicago is an innovation in political matters. The extraordinary part of the proceedings was the fact that the largest democratic club in the country with business men for members, should have endorsed the president's declared intention of recommending to congress legislation for control of railroad rates and the offer to sustain him politically in so doing. These Chicago democrats evidently believe the republican majority will desert the president on the railroad issue and hence their offer of assistance. They virtually follow the lead of the democratic members of the congress who sustained the recommendation of the president for similar legislation by voting for the Esch-Townsend bill after their preliminary vote for the democratic Davy bill.

Either we are on the eve of a political millenium or the most strenuous political upheaval since the civil war. Time alone can tell.

The Rule of Irony.

Last Monday, the party (self-constituted) claiming to be members of a Law and Order League met last Monday afternoon and "laid down the law" to the saloon men of this city. Men possess great courage sometimes, especially when the law is all in their favor. Not content with binding the saloon keepers not to open on Sunday, they now demand that all screens and blinds should be removed from the front end of the saloons. So far, the Sunday law has been observed, and very strictly, too, for the past two Sundays. Perhaps, being greatly encouraged by the success of their dictatorial authority so far, this body of men, constituting themselves the Law and Order League of Plattsmouth choose to further inflict upon the men whom the city authorities have licensed to do business, more serious orders to retard their business. If these men have no rights, under the protection of the city government, why are they licensed at all? To have the rights guaranteed them by the city taken away from them by a set of men who are not doing so for the purpose of advancing the interests of the city at all, but for the purpose of creating an ill-feeling among business men, which a set of men under the same cognoman did a few years ago, is not right. After which one of the principal maneuverers was "pushed" to seek a more congenial climate for an act far worse than playing ball on Sunday or keeping screens up at the front door.

The writer does not use liquor in any form, and has not been in any of the saloons a dozen times in the past three years. It matters not to him whether Plattsmouth has a saloon within her limits or not, but as long as they are permitted to run in the city, and have to pay a big sum for the privilege of doing so, they certainly should be granted some rights which should be respected. And not "hounded" by a little ring of men banded together under the title of a Law and Order League, simply because they are backed by the Slocum law in carrying out what they would not otherwise have had the courage to do.
