A SUCCESSFUL INVENTION

"The McEntee" a Dump Wagon to Facilitate and Expedite Grading for Railroad Construction.

DISCOVERED BY ONE OF OUR CITIZENS

Manufacturing Concerns Turning Out Many Wagons.—One Exhibited in This City by the Inventor.

For the past several months the Journal has been following with much interest the progress of "The McEntee" dump wagon, which was invented by one of our citizens, C. E. McEntee, who in the forty years of experience as a railroad contractor, has realized the necessity of a more substantial, as well as simple conveyance, in order to facilitate the labor of unloading at a desired point, without any delay. After much study and many experiments he has perfected a wagon which is fully up to the expectations or requirements of the most critical grading contractor.

After perfecting a model of the dump wagon, it was with difficulty that Mr. McEntee obtained a suitable contract for the manufacturing and selling of the wagons, as many of the concerns demanded the absolute and exclusive right to make and sell the wagons in the United States, while one company, recognizing the value of the wagon, proposed to purchase the patent for several thousand dollars, and give Mr. McEntee a royalty of one dollar for each wagon sold. Feeling confident that he could secure more favorable concessions from other factories, he took the matter up with Kilburn & Jacobson of Columbus, O., manufacturer of railroad tools, and as a result a contract was made with them to manufacture and sell the dump wagon in the several states adjoining Ohio. After this success a similar contract was soon made with the O'Brien wagon works of Shenandoah, Ia., who have turned out quite a number of the new wagons, which find a ready sale in Nebraska, Missouri, Indian Territory, and wherever they are exhibited. A few weeks ago Mr. McEntee returned from a trip to the east, where, together with his son Dave, who is looking after the eastern territory, he visited several manufacturing plants, whose management gave much encouragement, and a firm in Roxbury, Mass., will soon be able to supply the demand in the east for these wagons.

The dump wagon is only one of many useful inventions especially adapted to construction work made by Mr. McEntee. Among other things, he has invented an arrangement with which the wagon can be loaded to advantage without loss of time. About a year ago a number of our business men were interviewed in regard to organizing a company and starting a factory to make these wagons in this city, but failing to comprehend the significance of the invention, the project was not consummated, while now Shenandoah has a factory of this kind employing over one hundred and fifty men, who can turn out in a day twenty wagons, retailing at one hundred and fifteen dollars.

The first of the wagons to be seen in this city was exhibited today at Richley's lumber yard. It is one of these made by the Shenandoah company, and is in every way especially designed to expedite grading for railroad lines, and for transferring soil from one place to another. The plan of the wagon is well conceived—the box being divided in two parts—which, when a lever is pressed down by the foot of the driver, swings downward, depositing the load between the four wheels. The two parts of the box are evenly balanced, and when relieved of a load, resume their natural position, ready for another load. The dumping is accomplished at any desired point, with wagon in motion or standing still, while the driver occupies a seat somewhat in front of the self-adjusting sections of the wagon box. The wagon is fitted with a brake, which is also adjustable, and at the same time as simple as the other parts in operation. The entire wagon is very substantially built and a patent has been applied for.

The Journal is pleased to note the success with which a Plattsmouth citizen has met with, and hopes that steps will be taken toward securing such an industry for our city.

Nebraska and the United States are not the only places where one may find freak legislation, or at least such proposed legislation. The Dutch parliament has just passed an act making it a misdemeanor for anyone to fly over Holland in an airship. And the village constable who set out to arrest offenders would have to do more than hit the ground in the high places.

A Boston man thinks the dead may be restored to life by hypnotic suggestion, which goods the Minneapolis Journal into saying that there are a dozen dead ones in the senate whom even a suggestion could not reach. This must be the limit.

This is a mistake as the first sawmill built in Nebraska was built by S. M. Kirkpatrick, in the summer of 1855. It was built on the Weeping Water, where Nehawka now stands, which was then, or rather afterwards known as Mt. Pleasant, from the fact that the mail for the surrounding country was received at a postoffice of that name. A great deal of lumber was sawed in the fall of 1855 and the winter of 1855-56. The high water in the spring of 1856 carried away the mill. It is still sound and you can readily guess much harder than when first sawed. E. A. KIRKPATRICK.
