VERY PLEASANT GATHERING

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Porter Entertain in Honor of Miss Pearl Lewis

At the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Porter of near Murray, Wednesday evening, August 28, was a very beautiful scene when Mr. and Mrs. Porter and Miss Leola Vallery gave a party in honor of the latter's guest, Miss Pearl Lewis, of Coleridge, Neb., who has been visiting the past two weeks.

The evening was a very enjoyable one to all. Music and social conversation held sway during the early part of the happy event, while the latter part was spent in playing various games. At the usual hour all adjourned to the dining room, the table was very tastefully decorated with flowers. Ice cream and cake was served by Mrs. Porter, assisted by Miss Ada and Grace Porter, Gertie Hoback and Clara Copenhagen.

At a late hour all departed for their various homes bidding Miss Pearl farewell and wishing her many more happy returns, and also pronouncing the host and hostess royal entertainers. ### Double Wedding at Council Bluffs.

Two couples from Murray were married at Council Bluffs yesterday. They were Charles W. Mutz, aged 27, and Lydia M. Gray, aged 28, and M. Iver Standish, aged 22, and Florence Reed, aged 17. These are some of the best young people of Murray, whom all respect and honor.

They, in roguishness, thought a short trip to our neighboring state, and there to celebrate the event of joining their lives, would be a diversion from the every day, prosaic wedding, they were united at the same time, making a double wedding. The Journal joins with the many friends of the happy people, in wishing them all the joys which this old world has in store for them, and that their lives may be as free from those things which make of life an unpleasant and dreary waste as is possible. This life has many possibilities, and in the field which we enter for success in any line the chances of all are about even, some think themselves handicapped, and be at a disadvantage in the race for whatever they may prize at the end, but if they will only put forth the best effort and employ all the resources which are at hand, the banner they prize in the end will be theirs. So in the married state, that happiness which we wish our young friends who are starting in the race, is theirs for the taking. Make of this home which you are now going to build an emblem of that other home in the great hereafter, and your happiness here will be complete and assured in the world to come.

Mrs. Wm. Sporer went to Lincoln Wednesday afternoon to attend the state fair.

Mr. Edward Spangler and Miss Nellie Jean Joined in Wedlock.

At the pleasant home of Chas. L. Jean, south of Plattsmouth, last evening at eight o'clock, was solemnized the wedding of his beautiful and accomplished daughter, Miss Nellie and Mr. Edward Spangler, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of both families, and while Miss Pearl Huffer was playing the beautiful Mendelssohn wedding march, the happy couple marched to the appointed place, followed by Frank Jean a brother of the bride, as best man, and Miss Gertrude Cole as bridesmaid, and halting as the music ceased, Rev. S. W. Brink, said the fateful words which joined the lives of the happy young people. After their ceremony they all sat down to a sumptuous supper. After the supper and a season spent in congratulations and good wishes the newly married pair started for the train which left west at about eleven o'clock. They will make a trip to the west, going the Yellowstone Park and visiting many other points while away, expecting to be absent about two weeks. When they return they will make their home on the old Spangler homestead about three and one-half miles south of this city. The Journal joins with the hosts of friends of these young people in wishing them all the joy and happiness in this life that it is possible to extract from it, knowing full that there are joys untold for all who will but gather them, not forgetting though that we must make the most of the moments as they go, for we say:

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may
Old Time is still a flying,
For this same hour that smiles today;
Tomorrow may be dying.

DEATH OF HENRY REYNOLDS

His Death Caused from Paralysis at Sheridan, Wyoming

Many will remember Henry Reynolds, brother of B. J. Reynolds (Charlie) the night yardmaster of the Burlington at this point, as having worked for the Burlington at this place in the capacity of a switchman, and also at Omaha, where he worked for a number of years. Some three years ago Henry went to Sheridan, Wyoming, where he entered the Burlington shops. About two weeks ago he was stricken with paralysis and at the time his brother was called to his bedside, and after a while he showed symptoms of recovery and his brother came home only to be here but a few days when he received word that Henry had had a second stroke which caused his death.

B. J. Reynolds departed immediately for Sheridan where he should have arrived late last night. When leaving it was not known whether the remains would be brought to this place for burial or not. Mrs. Reynolds was formerly Miss Mary Houck, whose people live in Omaha and South Omaha, and it is supposed that the remains will be brought here for interment. He leaves of his family a wife and an only son, who is about twelve years old. He also leaves a father who is well along in years, being about 75, who lives at Nevada, Missouri, the mother having died about twenty years ago. More relative to the funeral will be given when it is known.

WHAT GRIT AND ENERGY WILL DO

George Spangler, a Cass County Boy at the Capital of Nebraska

REARED ON HIS FATHER'S FARM

But Now a Member of One of the Leading Business Firms in Lincoln

George A. Spangler was born about 44 years ago on his father's farm three and one-half miles south of this city, and lived on the farm until about fifteen years ago, when he thought he might get along as well somewhere else as on the farm, and he went to Lincoln and took a course in the business college. After he had completed his course in the school he secured a position in the wholesale house of John Kirkpatrick & Co., of Lincoln, where he worked for three or four years. After a few years in this line he resigned the place which he had occupied since he left the business college, and accepted a position in the wholesale goods' furnishing house of Herman Bros., who also operated a manufacturing plant for shirts, overalls, etc. With this house he stayed until about two years ago, when in company with another clerk in the same house, E. R. Deputy, they embarked in business for themselves, under the firm name of the Deputy-Spangler Hat Company. In this they did well, and have succeeded even beyond their expectations. Now they have purchased the Hardy Glove Manufacturing Company's plant and are running this in connection with their wholesale house, and in all employ something near forty people. In the glove factory they employ about twenty five people and receive the supplies by the car-load. On the road now they keep employed about fourteen men who cover the entire western country. They have three brands of fir hats which they make a specialty of, the "Controller," which retails at $1.50, the "Spangler," which retails at $2.50, and the "Deputy" which sells for $3.00, all of which can be found on sale in this city.

In order to equip himself for the business which would be his to do in the future. At the school he studied and learned, too; he knew that in order to plow corn he had to work, and if he husked seventy-five bushels of corn in a day he would have to work to do it. So when he went after the lessons in school, he knew that the work and the determination which had brought the tasks on the farm to a successful termination, would also solve the vexing questions in the school room, and later in the business experience. After leaving school and entering the employ of the Kirkpatrick company, he was as alert to learn as he had been in school, and as a consequence made rapid advances.

George Spangler was an ordinary citizen, plowing corn, making hay, husking corn, and other kinds of work of a similar character. In this he did not see a very clear future, and so he thought he would try something else. He was now twenty-nine years old and while some people might have said he was too old to go to school, he dropped the farm work, and with his country ways, his rough, calloused hands, went to the city to make his way. Here he first took a course in a business college

In his coming into contact with the world in his new position he felt that the interest of his employers was his interest, and when he came to do business for himself he did not have to revise his business ethics, but was in a position for the pushing of the business which was his own. He and his partner are now enjoying a fine business and with the field they occupy and the careful attention they are putting to the business which they have acquired, the future looks bright to them.

About eleven years ago Mr. Spangler married, and he has a nice home in the capitol city where he lives. This success which has come to him in the venture, is the result of application to business and not afraid to work, with the welfare of the patrons of the concern for which he is working, and the firm, always in view. What he has done anyone can accomplish if they will only put forth the effort, and make the sacrifices, in order to win that success in the end. This was not done by spending his evenings in the saloon, the club, or reading trashy novels. But it was the result of living within his means and saving what was left after paying for a good living, and carefully investing it; and knowing every detail in the business which he has chosen as his vocation in life. Mr. Spangler's many friends will be pleased to know that he has wrested the banner of success from seemingly adverse circumstances, and we for one are pleased to see one of our own boys climbing the ladder of fame.
