Tainted News.

Have you read in your local paper a news item telling about "The International Harvester company's welfare, work and pensions" and have you read another declaring that the Indiana state plant for the manufacture of binding twine is a failure? The editor of the Commoner saw these two items on the page of a South Dakota paper, and suspecting that they were advertisements, made inquiry and learned that they were furnished by the International Harvester company and published under an advertising contract. The name of the company does not appear in the article on the Indiana state plant, but the harvester company seems to think that it is worth the money (at advertising rates) to make the people believe that the state of Indiana cannot afford to make binding twine at the penitentiary. But why does the harvester company have it published as a news item? Why is it not signed by the company? The reason is obvious—the company prefers to mislead the public. And why does the company pay for the published praise of its dealings with its employers? To conciliate the public. And here, too, it reads better as a news item than it would as a nadvertisement. And what shall we say of the ethics of this kind of advertising? The reader ought to know when he is reading a paid advertisement and when he is reading impartial news.—The Commoner. The Journal came within an "ace" of being caught by this fake concern. We suppose, however, that hundreds of newspapers were, especially those who eagerly grab at every proposition that comes along.

Surprised on Birthday.
Last evening Miss Alma Larsen was the most surprised young lady there has been in Plattsmouth for some time. A number of her friends were made wise to the fact that her natal day occurred on September 21, though they did not obtain this information from Miss Alma. To make the surprise complete she was not allowed to get a hint of what was being planned by the girls of the court house and other offices.
About 8:30 nine (an odd number) of her girl friends, notwithstanding the threatening aspect of the weather, repaired to the Larsen home and proceeded to enjoy the anniversary of the event of Miss Larsen's birth. To say that she was surprised will not half express it. She was dazed. The evening passed very pleasantly with games and music. Ice cream and cake were served and all present enjoyed the occasion hugely.
The invited guests were: Misses Teresa Hempel, Gertrude Beeson, Anna Hassler, Helen Cline, Mary Foster, Lillie and May Murphy, Bernice Nowell, Jessie Robertson, Mia Gering, Katie McHugh, Frances Weidman and Mrs. McVicker.

The last two weeks have seen a goodly number of our fall suits go out of the store.

The nobby ones are going first. You'll know ours when you see them. They fit different from the common clothes. The young men's line especially large, peg top trousers with a 3-inch turnup, broad shoulder coats, and the materials mostly of the new rough weaves in grays and blues, which are the most popular of this season's shades.

It'll pay you to look at our line first. We won't urge you to buy.
