ENSILAGE CATTLE SELL AT GOOD PRICE

Stock Takes on Flesh Rapidly, and What is More Important, Sells Well.

O. H. Allen of Wabash was in again today with a car of cattle of his own feeding. There were six cows and fifteen heifers in the car, the whole lot averaging 1,061 pounds and selling at $6.25. The cows were out of a lot that cost as feeders $3.65. These cattle were started December 1, on alfalfa hay and ensilage and on January 1, were put on a full feed, consisting of twenty to twenty-five pounds of ensilage, twelve pounds of shelled corn and two to three pounds of hay per head per day.

It is impossible to state the amount of gain in weight for the reason that Mr. Allen has a large bunch on feed and keeps shipping the tops out a car or two at a time. It is very certain, however, that the cattle have done exceedingly well, as shown by the price at which they sold. Mr. Allen has made a great success of feeding ensilage and is very enthusiastic over the silo as an adjunct to cattle feeding. A very full report of his method was published in the Journal-Stockman of March 2.—Journal-Stockman, South Omaha, March 3d.

FREE HOMESEKERS' EXCURSION.

I have arranged to get a rate of $30.00 round trip to Dermott, Arkansas, on the second day of May, where we have 15,000 acres of fine farm lands for sale. Those buying land while there will have their railroad fare returned. For further particulars apply to or write, Extension Telephones!

A second instrument on your line—placed in another part of the store or another room of your residence. In the first instance it saves the time of your clerk, which would be wasted, in running across the building to answer, and it saves the customer an annoying wait while he gets there.

In the house it saves the wife many steps up and down stairs. By her bedside it is quick and efficient protection in case of fire or burglary. At the sick bed it is an unerring and untiring servant and, with the convalescent, affords a visit with anxious friends at home or at a distance. The cost is trifling.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION BALLOTS

The Law Says Emphatically How Names Shall Be Rotated on Same.

A statement issued Monday by Secretary of State Wait and which was sent out to the various county clerks of the state along with the list of candidates which were certified out, does not meet with the hearty approval of some of the political leaders, says the Lincoln News. This is true particularly of that part which relates to the rotation of the names on the coming primary ballot. Bearing on this matter, Secretary Wait said:

"It has been suggested that the delegates be designated on the ballot as to their choice for president. I think the better way, however, would be to rotate the names in fours, instead of singly, of the delegates and alternates at large, and in two of the district delegates, thus keeping together the two sets as endorsed by the separate leagues. I have no authority in the matter of instructions to give you, and as the primary law does not cover the situation, it is up to you to use your own discretion. The above plan might in some instances aid a voter in making his choice for delegate. No requests from other political parties have been made for this manner of making up the ballot. The primary law does not authorize this department to issue a sample ballot."

In direct opposition to these recommendations of the state official, the law under which county clerks must operate has this to say on the matter: "In printing the tickets for the various election districts the position of the names shall be changed in each office division for election district. In making the change of position the printer shall take the line of type at the head of each office division and place it at the bottom of that division, shoving up the column so that the name which was second before the change shall be first after the change." This clause of the law would appear to check the suggestions made by the secretary of state and would prevent his ideas from being carried into effect in the manner he set out in his communication to the county officials.

Officials of some of the factional leagues have suggested that his suggestion is fully as much a breach of the intent of the primary law as the plan whereby they wished to have the various candidates for delegates designated by their presidential alliances. Attention has also been called to the fact that the pairing which the state official has suggested would be impossible to accomplish under the present situation. On the democratic ticket, for instance, there are four Wilson candidates for delegate-at-large, and only three anti-Wilson candidates for those places. Granted that the suggestion of the secretary could legally be followed, it would mean that a Wilson candidate in many precincts be paired with the three anti-Wilson men. In other voting precincts the pairing of candidates for delegates-at-large, as the state official suggests, would throw two Wilson men and two anti-Wilson men in the same category. In many of the congressional districts of the state the plan of dividing into pairs would not be feasible because of odd numbers of candidates in various factions of both the democratic and republican parties.

Several weeks ago it was thought that the arrangement whereby a one or two-word presidential designation could be put after the candidates' names, would be acceptable to the state official. Taft men, however, objected to that when their progressive brethren declared that they would have the words "La Follette-Roosevelt" follow the names of the men whom they had filed for the delegate places. The objection appeared so valid in the mind of the secretary of state that he ruled that no designation should be made after the names of the candidates.
