WHAT THE BURLINGTON IS DOING WITH ITS LIFE-SAVING PROPOSITION

Trespassers Continue to Trespass and Get Killed Notwithstanding all the Efforts That President Miller and His Assistants Can Put Forth.

About four months ago the president of the Burlington sent a letter to the governors of the states through which his line runs regarding the trespassers who are killed on railways, says the Railway Age-Gazette. In the course of it he said: "If the average for the last ten years is holding good, fourteen people were killed yesterday while trespassing on the railways, whose deaths were wholly unnecessary and under proper laws might have been avoided; fourteen will be killed tomorrow. And yet, chiefly because these fourteen people are killed daily meet their deaths in fourteen different places, almost no public notice is taken nor concern manifested." But, Mr. Miller said in this connection: "If a wreck should take place tomorrow in which fourteen people should die, the news of it would be widely printed over the country."

It was the irony of fate that in so short a time a collision accident took place on the Burlington itself in which thirteen people were killed, and that there ensued the very result Mr. Miller anticipated. The news about the wreck at Western Springs has been printed all over the country, and the accident is being investigated by the coroner of Cook county, the Illinois commission and the interstate commerce commission. It has been the subject of column after column of newspaper comment, and it is thought that some important recommendations by the public authorities may result.

Meantime, it seems pertinent to inquire, what are the public authorities, who are so diligently inquiring into the sensational Burlington accident and preparing recommendations on the facts disclosed, doing along the same line to prevent the deaths of the fourteen trespassers who are killed each day on the average on our railways? Nothing. The trespassers continue to trespass, they continue to be killed at the rate of 5,000 a year, and the public authorities and the public continue to do nothing about them and apparently to care nothing about them. They find it much more agreeable to become excited and active about the fatalities for which they may hold the railways and their employes responsible than about those for which they themselves are responsible, although those for which they themselves are responsible are many times the more numerous.

Trips Are Expensive-- Letters Unsatisfactory

Railroad trips are tiresome and expensive, and letters never satisfactory. Paper and ink, somehow, always seem cold and bloodless, lacking that human touch of the living, laughing voice of a friend as one hears it over the telephone.

A telephone in the home is not a luxury, not an extravagance, but an absolute necessity to your comfort, convenience and safety, permitting you at all times to be in touch with your nearby neighbors and far-away friends.

GARDEN FETE A GRAND SUCCESS

Large Crowd in Attendance and Everyone Has a Very Enjoyable Time.

The garden fete, given by the "Melchizedeks" at the R. B. Windham home last evening, proved to be one of the most delightful entertainments of the season held in this city. The young ladies had exerted every effort to make the affair a success and are highly elated over the results.

There were many features last night of much excellence. To start with the night was a most ideal one. The lawn had been prettily lighted with Chinese lanterns, electric lights and the like and the five booths, located at various places about the lawn, were very attractively decorated. To enter the lawn was almost an approach to fairyland, owing to the handsome design of the several booths and the artistic effects of their decorations.

About 8:30 a short program was rendered on the east porch of the Windham home. Misses Elizabeth Falter and Marie Douglass furnished reading and kept the audience thoroughly at attention by their finished style and pleasing manner. A ladies' quartet, composed of Misses Kathryn Windham, Hallie Parmele, Frances Weidman and Lucile Gass, contributed a charming vocal selection, after which a playette entitled "The Old Maids' Tea Party," was given. Those taking part in this playette were Misses Elizabeth Falter, Mildred Cummins, Lucile Gass and Kathryn Windham. They were typical old maids and the talkingest ladies—the oldest old maid favored the company with a vocal selection. This was the first time she had ever sung in public, and the way she sang was very realistic and amusing. After several very graceful steps, these talkingest old maids drank their tea and ate their cake.

This concluded the program and then the guests were invited to visit the various booths about the lawn. The booths represented foreign countries, the first being Spain. This booth was of a very pretty design, being done in the yellow and red colors. The young ladies, dressed in Spanish costumes, served delicious fruit punch and wafers for a nominal sum.

Ireland was represented by a very pretty booth, erected in the form of a porch, in the green and white colors, with the shamrock decorations, and which delighted the eye. This booth was a very tastily gotten up affair and attracted much attention. At this booth elegant home-made candies were very much in evidence, and which sold quite rapidly. The young ladies in charge were dressed in green and white.

Picturesque Holland was also a booth of novelty, being built in the shape of a Dutch dyke around which mounds of grass, foliage and the Dutch wind-mills had been arranged. Miniature ferry boats were located at the head of the dyke, in which the guest placed a nickel and the boat was drawn to the other end of the dyke and returned, bearing a little surprise for each purchaser. The young ladies in charge of this booth were appropriately dressed in the Dutch costume.

The last booth and the one representing Japan, was in the form of a Japanese tea room, where the young ladies, dressed in Japanese style, served iced tea, sandwiches and olives.

Away back in a dark, spooky corner, the "Den of Horror" was located, where the guests encountered many horrible things and which provoked much fun.

The Garden Fete was a grand success in every way and the young ladies netted over $40, which amount will be used for frescoing the walls of the lecture room of the Presbyterian church. The "Melchizedeks" wish to thank the public for their liberal patronage, both in the purchasing of tickets and at the booths.
