BAUER'S OLD STAND

ENROUTE FROM SOUTH DAKOTA TO CALIFORNIA

From Saturday's Daily.
Yesterday afternoon a large touring car bearing the sign "Redfield, S. D., to San Diego, California," passed through the city, coming from the north over the Pollock-Duff wagon and auto bridge, and followed the Scenic Route to the southwest. Every day some party of tourists passes through this city over the bridge and that structure is contributing more than anything that has been done here in recent years to place Plattsmouth on the map. In the summer the travel will be quite heavy and this city will derive a great deal of benefit from the tourists who will stop in this city for a short time at least.

Sargeant is Reappointed.

From Saturday's Daily.
Dispatches from Washington convey the information that President Taft has sent the name of W. K. Sargeant to the senate to be postmaster at Elmwood to succeed himself. This appointment is in line with the policy of the administration to fill the post-offices with republicans before the Wilson administration comes into office on March 4. These appointments are quite likely to strike a snag in the senate, where a number of the democrats are talking of holding up this class of appointments.

"WHAT OUR TOWN NEEDS"

Every Town of Importance Has Some Citizens Who Believe in Improvements.

From Saturday's Daily.
It will soon be the time of year when the farmers cannot work in the fields and come to town to loaf during part of the day, for the big discussions to start in every village and hamlet, and in many of a larger growth, concerning "What our town needs." The opinions advanced will be as varied as the debaters are in numbers, and in few cases will it be decided, we fear, whether a new street inspector, a city library and town hall or a water works system will be the most progressive move. Everyone has a "town" in which he is specially interested so this can apply to all.

It is not our purpose to attempt to prescribe or dictate what any town needs in the way of an individual improvement to make it a better, more progressive city. Perhaps it is a better lighting system, perhaps a city library, perhaps more attention to the streets, or maybe it is a High school building or a town hall. The people who make up the citizenship of any town ought to be the ones to decide on these matters.

But we do know something that every town needs, and which far too few of them have, and that is the spirit of progress and co-operation which will make every person in the city willing to put a shoulder to the wheel and work for those things which will do the town as a whole good.

We know of a few towns of this sort, some of them not very large either, which are making a name for themselves that is worth more than they probably imagined when they started their campaign for city improvement. When there is something needed or something which will do the town good which can be landed Blacksmith Jones and Storekeeper Brown and Cobler Smith do not stop to ask if they are going to make a big "rakeoff" by boosting for the thing. They get in with Private Citizen Green and Black and help land the improvement, whatever it is. And the people from all over the country point to these towns and remark, "They do things down there. They have the proper spirit." If your town needs a boom take our advice and get that spirit, and you will get the boom as a natural consequence.

WHO ESTABLISHED EPISCOPAL CHURCH?

The Charge Seems Preposterous and Is Denied by Those in Authority for the Church.

From Saturday's Daily.
Plattsmouth, Dec. 6, 1912.

To the Journal:
Since coming to assume the Rectorship of St. Luke's Parish I have several times heard of the statement being made "That the Episcopal church (meaning the present Church of England) was founded by Henry the Eighth."

Since the absolute continuity of the English church, after Henry the Eighth, with the same church before Henry the Eighth—has been proven again and again by England's greatest historians, including Prof. Freeman of the university of Oxford, and has been confirmed by decisions of the Privy council, the highest court in the empire. The following extract from the "Living Church," of December 7, 1912, will be of interest to many of your readers, and in justice to the students of correct history, as well as the church in America, the direct lineal descendant of the church of England, I will ask you to publish the same.

"Chicago Schools Must Not Teach
The Henry the Eighth Myth."
(From the Living Church, Chicago, December 7, 1912.)
"An unexpected blow for respectable teaching of history has lately been struck in Chicago. The circumstances were as follows: The teacher of English history in one of the largest High schools in Chicago lately gave her pupils to understand that Henry the Eighth founded the Church of England. In her class was a member of the prayer book class in a neighboring parish. This young girl brought this public school information with her to the prayer book class. Accordingly the Rector of this parish wrote a strong protest to a member of the Chicago board of education. He in his turn, took up the matter with Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, the justly celebrated superintendent of Chicago's public schools. Mrs. Young promptly issued a circular to every teacher in the city's public schools, commanding that no teacher should ever teach a class that Henry the Eighth founded the Church of England."

CHARLES HIATT HAS BADLY INJURED HAND

From Saturday's Daily.
Charles Hiatt is suffering from a badly injured hand, the result of an accident that he sustained while engaged in helping in the new store of Hiatt & Tutt at Murray. Mr. Hiatt was engaged in helping transfer some potatoes in the cellar of the store with E. S. Tutt, when, in swining a large sack of potatoes he struck his hand on the cement wall, tearing the flesh off the top of the hand laying the bone bare in several places. He did not pay any particular attention to the wound until his brother, Demmie and Mr. Tutt insisted on his going to the doctor to have the hand treated, when he consulted Dr. B. F. Brendel, who dressed the wound and warned Mr. Hiatt that he would have to be very careful or serious results might set in. The hand is still very sore and painful and will keep Charley on the retired list for several days, which is very hard, as he is a gentleman who is always on the go and who cannot stand it to remain idle.
