With corn at its present high price it is just like shelling out gold dollars to feed cattle.

From present indications the pool man with a family is the one who will suffer from high prices.

If "poor people have poor ways," then a lot of us ought to change our ways and watch the results.

As we go through life we can prey on one another or we can spare one another. It is for ourselves to decide If we spare others we not only avoid creating misery in their minds but we escape many disagreeable consequences ourselves. For those who prey on others in the small ways of life are always in hot water. Those who spare others secure a certain amount of immunity which, in itself is a compensation decidedly worth while.

Where relatives and friends live in close intimacy there is bound to be a least one operator of this kind, and one alone can spread a disease that is like scurvy among sailors, finding nourishment in the little personal observations that are made both when people are on their guard and off their guard. It is impossible for human beings, however careful, to hide their real opinions of one another all the time. A chance remark, perhaps led up to or inspired by the quoter but never referred to when the quotation is delivered where it may do most harm, may be converted into poison.

The Christian Science Monitor says: "It is coming to be more generally known that electricity is gradually superseding steam on many railroad lines in the United States. Everybody is aware by this time, of course. about the electrification of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul's Pacific coast extension, but everybody has not known of the electrification of the freight tracks of the Norfolk & Western and other lines, or of the recent decision of the directors to electrify
