"THE OLD HOMESTEAD."

The attraction at the Parmele on Saturday, Dec. 1st, will be a grand revival of Denman Thompson's famous play, "The Old Homestead," which will be presented here by an excellent company, including many artists who have been identified with the piece from fifteen to twenty years. A complete new scenic production has been made and every feature and detail of the original presentation has been accentuated. During the forty years of its existence, the lovable character of Joshua Whitecomb has become the best known on the American stage. Everyone is familiar with the wholesome story, the play tells so that a few facts about its wonderful history may be more interesting to our readers at this time.

West Swanzy, six miles below Keene, New Hampshire, is the original locale of "The Old Homestead." The original old homestead is now an ideal country home. Joshua Whitecomb and other characters in the play were taken bodily from the streets of West Swanzy. Joshua Whitecomb is an actual reproduction of two personages in Swanzy known as Capt. Otis Whitecomb and Joshua Holbrook. Capt. Otis furnished the comedy and Joshua the more serious elements of the combination. The original of Aunt Matilda was a sister of Joshua Holbrook, and known to all the people of Swanzy as "Aunt Rhody"—a tender, honest, faithful old lady who transmitted the joys and sorrows of her life and home into pure gold. "Cy" Prime was a well-known townman who had the reputation of being the biggest liar in Cheshire county, and Seth Perkins was a combination of several characters. Henry Hopkins, the city man, was an old New Hampshire play-fellow of Denman Thompson's, the author. Mr. Thompson's aim in writing "The Old Homestead" was a homely but true picture of farm life, to illustrate the best there is in human nature, to awaken the memories and to stir the emotions of men and women who have come from the farm and to teach a wholesome lesson to the young. "The Old Homestead" as a play in its present form was presented to the public for the first time in the Boston Theatre, April 1886. It was first presented as a vaudeville sketch at Harry Martin's Varieties, Pittsburg, February, 1875.
