After graduation from school she chose the profession of teaching, and served as school teacher three years in her home school district.

Clara took special interest in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work of the community, and thereby gave practical testimony of the faith she had professed. Her happy-joyful disposition in character and bearing won her friends. She was a young woman of good health and as it was not known that she was sick the community was overwhelmed with grief and sympathy with the mourning family.
