To save is to insure yourself and your family protection.

Doing Some Good Work.

John Eppings and Virgil Arnold, who have the road work on the north and south roads from the Platte river to the Otoe county line, are making some excellent roads and at the same time are redeeming the none too good stretch from Murray to the intersection with the highway on the east. This piece of road has been cut up by heavy traffic which should not be brought under the proper condition with the limited work which could be given it heretofore. But the making of their headquarters in town it required the traveling over this place and thus gave it double work and with excellent results.

MAY-YOUNKER

The parsonage of the Christian church was the scene of another surprise wedding on Wednesday evening March 2. When Rev. D. S. Thompson returned from prayer meeting he found awaiting him a fine young couple, and they made it known that they had a mission for him to fulfill.

It would be but natural and mayhap an obligation that when the J. M. C.'s find, that when one of their number is to take upon herself a higher obligation, they should see that the aforesaid member was properly chaperoned.

Therefore, when Claude L. May and Miss Vesta M. Younker presented themselves before Rev. Thompson to take the solemn vows, the Misses Twyla Deerwester and Hattie Royal, fellow J. M. C.'s were present to note the taking of the higher obligation. All of the home members of the parsonage also witnessed the important ceremony. The groom is the fine son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. May, who have given over the management of the farm home to their son and become residents of Glenwood.

The bride is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Younker. She is a graduate of Glenwood schools and has been a teacher in Mills county schools since her graduation.

Both blessed with friends and with devoted parents, and having a furnished home by the foresight of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. May start their voyage upon the matrimonial sea under favorable auspices. The Tribune joins in congratulations.—Glenwood Tribune.

MAKING ROAD SURVEY ACROSS STATE

Federal Engineers Going Over Lincoln Highway Prior to Laying Gravel Surfacing

A crew of three federal engineers arrived in Kearney last week, says the Kearney Hub, assigned the task of going over the Lincoln highway west prior to federal money being appropriated for gravel surfacing the road. Kearney is their initial stop, and they will be several weeks completing this final survey, as every hundred feet of the road is given a thorough examination. Records of this examination are compiled and sent to headquarters.

When the work is complete it is expected the permit will be given to put down a surfacing of gravel the entire length of the highway across Nebraska.

Considerable time is required to get the reports passed upon and an O. K. for the expenditure of federal funds, as the project must come up to federal specifications in every respect, including width, grade, drainage and the like. The graveling is also done under federal supervision.

The time will come when the Omaha-Kansas City highway through Plattsmouth will be similarly improved, a good start toward such end being comprehended in the bill now reported out on general file in the state legislature providing for the paving of the road from the outskirts of South Omaha to Fort Crook, nine miles north of this city. This project will also receive federal aid, and looks especially good from the government's standpoint inasmuch as it would provide ideal transportation facilities between Fort Crook and Fort Omaha, as well as to and from the supply depot located at 22nd and Waldron streets in Omaha.

SEVERAL OMAHA VIOLATORS FREED

Action Taken in Conformity Decision of Circuit Court Holding That Volstead Act Now Supreme Law

Through an order issued by United States Judge T. C. Munger, Tuesday, eighteen residents of Omaha convicted of violating the federal liquor laws are absolved from further punishment, and here they are serving time they are not set free. The defendants were punished under the old United States laws relating to liquor violations.

The order is made in conformity to the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals in the case of Ketchum versus the United States of America in which the court held that the Volstead act, known as the national prohibition law, is supreme over existing government liquor laws and supercedes them.

The order of the federal court is that the judgment and service heretofore entered each of the eighteen cases at this term of court be set aside and vacated and that the United States marshal is directed to release such defendants from further custody in the execution of such judgment and sentence.

The names of the persons affected by the order of Judge Munger: Julius De Large, Russell Miller, Joe Bamber, Tom Donek, Harry Zahn, Joe Murray, Christ Jensen, Theodore Katz, Deo Sokel, James McKenna, Michael Barna, John Thompson, Revere Flynn, Julius Epperle, George Veins, Frank Rankal, Frank Herzog and Joseph Sodomaka. Many were recently before the United States court.

In addition to fines running from $100 to $500, jail sentences were imposed on some of them for short and some for long terms. Nothing is indicated in the order that where fines have been paid, if any, that the government will refund the money. The Volstead act provides only the fines being imposed.
